Dr. Einstein Revises
Mr. Coolidge Elucidates
Mrs. Bruce Flies
Mrs. Pappas Laughs

By Arthur Brisbane

AN ENGLISHMAN, beating all records, travels four miles a minute in his automobile on the sands of Florida.

Airplanes have gone six miles a minute.

What will be the ultimate speed at which men will travel around the earth?

Probably about as fast as the sun seems to travel in its journey from east to west, 1000 miles an hour.

Giant planes will travel in the thin atmosphere, high up above storm and wind, with no motion of the air except a gentle breeze to the east, caused by the rotation of the earth. They will make their own repairs in the air, staying up perhaps two or three years at a time, dropping passengers in smaller airships at their various destinations.

Dr. Einstein, scientific puzzle of the century, refers to the great scientists of this period as his "forerunners" leading up to his incomparable achievement.

Those thus disposed of include Professor Michelson, of Chicago. How high Dr. Einstein will stay in the estimation of science 100 years hence, no one knows. But it is not at all certain that his services to science will be found equal to those of Professor Michelson, one of actual, concrete achievement.

It was Professor Michelson who first measured exactly the length of a ray in the spectrum, establishing permanent, exact measurement for all time.

It was he who corrected measurement of the speed of light, "yard stick" of the universe, essential to all astronomical calculations. And Michelson, in an experiment of infinite delicacy and difficulty, established the rigidity of the earth, about equal to that of a solid ball of steel, 25,000 miles around.

Dr. Einstein's recent announcement that he revises his opinions on the universe, which he had formerly circumscribed and limited arbitrarily, is important.

After talking with the gathering of American scientists in Los Angeles, he changed his personal arrangement of the universe, showing that his conclusions were not based on positive knowledge.

Nobody has ever changed anything in Newton's formula, "Directly as the mass and inversely as the square of the distance."

Considering that people of the Jewish race make up less than one-half of one per cent of earth's population, it is interesting to note that the two greatest living scientists are probably Michelson and Einstein, both Jews.

Others may excel them in certain branches, Jeans and Eddington in astronomy, for instance. But a vote of all the scientists in the world would place Einstein and Michelson at the top.

Calvin Coolidge, whose writings have made his name better known than ever, tells readers of the Chicago Herald and Examiner, Seattle Post Intelligencer, and other newspapers, that "The problem of agriculture has seemed so much the disposition of surplus production, that very little public thought has been given to soil exhaustion.

"Every year this country takes from the earth five and three-quarter billions more tons of plant food than is put back into the soil."

The question of soil exhaustion can easily be remedied. A little intelligence, planting crops that supply nitrogen, ploughing under, instead of harrowing, humous material.

In France wheat has been cultivated on the same land for 200 years, and the land produces more now than ever.

The big problem, surplus production, can be solved only by increase in population. If we had 50,000,000 more population in the United States there would be no surplus food problem, no good second hand automobiles unsold, no prosperity problem either.

France, smaller than one of our states, with 40,000,000 population, is the most prosperous country in the world. But our geese, in Congress, on farms and in labor unions, are afraid to admit the human beings that this country needs.

A wonderful woman, Mrs. Victor Bruce, who landed here after flying 18,000 miles around the world. Today she sails home to England, via Paris, landing by airplane at Croydon Field.

Mrs. Bruce had never flown, when she saw an airplane that struck her fancy in the window of a shop. She asked the clerk: "Do you think I could fly around the world in that machine? How quickly could I learn to fly?" He said, "Certainly, you could fly around the world. It will not take you long to learn to fly."

She learned to fly in a week.

Heroine of the Air Weds

MISS AMELIA EARHART, who gave up settlement work in Boston for a dash across the Atlantic in an airplane and became a celebrity overnight, today became the bride of George P. Putnam, New York publisher, who selected her to make the flight. She will continue her work as executive of a commercial air line.

Transatlantic Heroine and George P. Putnam Wed at His Mother's Home

New York, Feb. 7 (AP)—Amelia Earhart, transatlantic flier, and George Palmer Putnam, publisher and explorer, were married today at the home of Mr. Putnam's mother, Mrs. Frances Putnam, at Noank, Ct.

Announcement of the marriage was made by Mr. Putnam's secretary in New York and confirmed by relatives at Noank.

Judge Arthur Anderson performed the ceremony, which was witnessed by the groom's mother and Judge Anderson's son, Robert.

The bride said she would retain her maiden name and continue her executive position with an aviation company operating hourly planes between New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

She said she would be at her desk Monday and that her husband would be at work as usual in the New York publishing firm of Brewer & Warren, with which he is associated.

The romance of the young woman flyer and the explorer-publisher is traced to a meeting at which Mr. Putnam represented Mrs. Frederick Guest in a search for an aviatrix to fly across the Atlantic in the plane Friendship.

In the application for a marriage license Miss Earhart gave her age as 32, 10 years younger than Putnam. They will make their home temporarily at an apartment hotel in W. 58th st.

Posse Corners Pair on Farm; Girl Clerk Foils Holliston Bank Holdup

Two men, believed to be the bandits who attempted to rob the Holliston Savings Bank were captured this afternoon on the Pots Farm, Millis, by a posse of 25 State police.

Both men were armed and were being held at the farmhouse for questioning.

Holliston, Feb. 7—A gunman's bold attempt to steal $20,000 from the Holliston Savings Bank was frustrated today by Miss Isabel Twitchel, assistant treasurer of the bank, who disregarded his command "Stick up your hands" and sounded the burglar alarm.

The holdup man fled in a waiting car which skidded off the highway and tipped over between this town and Millis. The gunman and his confederate, driver of the car, fled into the woods and were surrounded by police armed with riot guns.

The robbery attempt occurred five minutes before closing time and while Miss Twitchel, aided by

CARRIED OVER LADDERS TO SAFETY

Traffic Officer Is a Hero at Westland Ave. Fire; the Loss Set at $5000

Fifteen persons were carried over ladders to safety or assisted to the street through smoke-filled corridors as a stubborn two-alarm fire roared through a five-story brick apartment building at 12A-14A Westland ave., Back Bay, early today.

The blaze broke out in a vacant second floor apartment in the building and gained considerable headway before it was discovered. By the time the first alarm was sounded the blaze had worked up through the third and fourth floors.

OCCUPANTS FLEE

It is estimated that some 35 tenants either ran or were assisted from the building. Members of Traffic Division 21 and of the headquarters flying squadron were rushed to the scene immediately after the first alarm.

Among those whom they led to safety through the flaming and smoky corridors were: E. M. Hall, William R. Clary, Sumner Marshall, Mrs. Peter Leach, Miss Myrtle Leach, Mrs. Frances Warren and Miss Evelyn Warren.

CARRIED OVER LADDERS

Three men and two women, garbed only in night-clothing, were carried over ladders from the third floor of the building. They were Miss Charlotte Brelin, Miss Mary Sheppard, Maurice Carpenter, Douglas Taylor and John Dunn.

Neighbors took many of the tenants into their homes and furnished them temporarily with clothing.

Fire officials stated that all the occupants of the building were either rescued or reached safety through their own efforts. They have not yet determined the cause of the blaze. Damage is estimated at $5000.

Warner Plans to Visit Grand Jury

Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner will appear before the Suffolk county grand jury on Monday, it was learned today. The nature of the case or cases in which he will appear is not known.

Here's a Prize 'Cold Hand'; You'd Be Surprised!

New York, Feb. 7—If you are invited into a good stiff bridge game with strangers, and if you are dealt a hand like this, have a care!

This is the card sharper's prize "cold hand," according to Sidney S. Lenz, bridge expert, who has been studying methods of the sharpers as the chief of 200 bridge experts employed by the French line.

The prize cold hand goes like this:

SPADES, A K.
HEARTS, A K Q J.
DIAMONDS, K J 9
CLUBS, A K Q J.

It is dealt to the man whose money is about to be taken.

YOU'LL BE SURPRISED!

One of the confederates holds four little diamonds and no spades, the other the high diamonds and a string of spades.

The confederates take the bid with five diamonds, doubled and redoubled. They seize control by trumping at the outset through the possessor of the seemingly innegotiable hand. It all sounds complicated, but work it out with a deck. You'll find the result to be a grand slam in diamonds.

BLAST HURTS 30 NEAR THEATER

Los Angeles, Feb. 7 (AP)—Thirty persons were injured, several seriously, and a panic in a theater audience of more than 2000 was narrowly averted when an explosion in a power main in front of the Orpheum Theater shook the building late last night.

So terrific was the blast that several persons standing in front of the theater were lifted into the air and others were hurled against store windows or burned. A portion of the street was torn up and windows smashed.

PANIC PREVENTED

A brilliant first-night audience, augmented by the presence of more than 1100 motion picture players, packed the theater for the premiere of "Cimarron." Many film stars were on the stage making personal appearance when the explosion shocked the theater.

Robert McWade, veteran stage and screen actor, averted a panic.

"Don't get excited folks," McWade cried. "That was just part of the celebration in my honor."

The audience laughed and grew calm.

STARS' CARS DAMAGED

The blast was due to accumulation of gas in the power main, according to H. E. Walker, member of the fire prevention bureau, attending the performance.

The cars of several motion picture luminaries, including that of the star of the picture, Richard Dix, and those of Mack Sennett and Constance Bennett, were parked near a taxicab which bore the brunt of the explosion. They were slightly damaged.

BOSTON HOCKEY TEAM WINS, 1-0

Krynics, Poland, Feb. 7 (AP)—The Boston Hockey Club, representing the United States in the international hockey tournament in progress here, today won its fourth straight game in the finals, defeating Poland, 1 to 0.

Only the Canadian entry, the University of Manitoba Grads, now stand between the Boston six and the world championship. A tie between these two teams in their match Sunday probably still would give the championship to the United States as the Canadian six was tied yesterday by Sweden.

Today's point made the Boston total in the final round robin series among the six finalists seven goals. The winner is to be decided on total goals.

Floating Wing May Be Part of Tradewind

London, Feb. 7 (AP)—Capt. Albin Johnson of the United States Shipping Board steamer Youngstown told the Associated Press when his vessel docked today at Havre that 130 miles northwest of the Azores his vessel had passed a piece of wreckage which looked like an airplane wing and might have been a part of the missing Atlantic plane Tradewind.

The wreckage was colored gray, he said, was approximately three feet wide and seven feet long and looked like part of an airplane wing. Other wreckage looked like part of a cork life-ring.

ONE MAN DEAD IN EXPLOSION AT ACTON POWDER PLANT

SECOND HAS CLOSE CALL IN BLAST

Left the Building Just in Time to Save Life as Fatal Roar Comes

Acton, Feb. 7—One man was instantly killed and another narrowly escaped death today when a digestor in the American Powder Works exploded.

Fred Brill, 22, of Maynard, was killed, and Harry Demery, his co-worker in the small building, escaped a similar fate when he left the building a few minutes before the explosion occurred.

The digestor, used for cooking nitrate of gun cotton, blew up with a roar that could be heard for over a half-mile, and brought the company's fire department to the scene. No fire followed the blast, which, officials say, probably saved other buildings of the plant.

Constructed of steel, the digestor is a cylinder, conical at each end, and the fragments of metal which were sent flying by the blast badly mangled Brill's body.

Demery, who was some distance away from the building, rushed back and defied the fumes which filled the building, to bring his co-worker's body out of the mass of debris.

Company officials immediately started an investigation as to the cause of the blast.

The medical examiner was notified, and immediately went to the scene to examine the body.

Officials of the American Powder Works estimated damage at $10,000.

Several Hurt in New Jap Diet Riot

London, Feb. 7 (INS)—The lower house of the Japanese Imperial Diet was the scene of another riot today, according to messages reaching London. Several members of the Diet were injured in the melee which took place in the lobby and committee room. The fight was precipitated when members of the opposition party attempted to keep the budget committee from convening.

—Men little know what power is locked up in women, going to waste during the last million years.

Mrs. Ruth Pappas, who lives in Chicago, laughs occasionally when she looks at her husband. On Wednesday in their West Harrison st. house, while she darned socks, her husband John told a friend that no holdup men "could get away with me." In walked three holdup men, one holding two revolvers. Mr. Pappas and his friends "reached for the ceiling" promptly.

Mrs. Pappas also raised her hands in the air, the highwaymen paying little attention to a poor frightened woman.

But Mrs. Pappas knew where her husband kept his revolver, edged over toward it, shot the two gunmen through the head, then entered a room where the third was robbing the bureau. He yelled, jumped under the bed, and then out of the window, as she fired.

Mrs. Pappas laughed, because before woman suffrage came in she heard men say so often that women were not fit to vote because they lacked courage necessary in war.

Shouse Sees Party as "Already Wet"

Miami, Fla., Feb. 7 (AP)—Jouett Shouse, chairman of the National Democratic Executive Committee, addressing party leaders here today, said:

25 ADRIFT ON A HUGE ICE FLOE

Buffalo, Feb. 7 (AP)—In the midst of a snow storm which was whipped by a driving east wind in almost blizzard intensity, five boats fought their way through the ice-strewn waters of Lake Erie this afternoon in a search for 25 or more fishermen adrift on a huge ice floe several miles off Buffalo harbor.

A dense screen of fog formed between the boats and the drifting floe, making the work of rescue doubly hard.

Commander Martin W. Rasmussen, in charge of the local Coast Guard station, despatched two ice skiffs, a cabin cruiser and two tugs in search of the drifting men as soon as he was informed of their plight. Later he ordered an airplane to aid in locating the huge floating island of ice which was driving westward rapidly.

Four men who leaped ashore at the Buffalo harbor breakwater when the ice floe first went adrift gave meager details of the accident.

The men said they had no hint of impending disaster until they were a considerable distance out from shore. They believed the section of ice which broke away was several miles in extent, but coast guards said it was only six or seven inches thick and in imminent danger of being pounded to pieces by the windlashed waters of the open lake.

Aces and Kings Melt Away in This Bridge Hand

of a transatlantic liner. You had better—and this is the advice of Lenz—keep a weather eye to the east, south and west.

Particularly watch their bidding. For if East, that charming and somewhat wistful gentleman whom you met yesterday on the promenade deck, says "one spade," he may mean something entirely different from "I bid one spade." At least it will mean something different to the girl who so graciously consented to take a fourth hand. To her confederate of East in many a highseas bridge encounter, the shift in words may identify every important card in East's hand.

For the card sharpers, who have seized upon the game of contract bridge as their especial gravy, work out revealing codes which net them plenty of profits, says Mr. Lenz.

"By a code of nine words I can identify every one of the 52 cards," the bridge expert says. "The sharpers can do as well—and have.

The codes are constantly shifted to avoid recognition.

TWO OTHER METHODS

Two other methods are used by the ocean-going slickers. They mark cards and they use the old cold deck game.

Cards are marked with a sharp finger nail or with a pen-point set in the player's vest. The idea is to raise a slight bump on the back of the ace, king and queen of each suit. The dealer feels these bumps as he deals, and "second-cards" his unsuspecting opponents. To "second-card" is to deal the card next to the top instead of the one on top—and the nimble fingered gentry are so facile at it that even wise onlookers can't detect them.

"SECOND-CARDING" THEM

This system of controlled distribution means that perhaps as many as ten of the high cards in the deck are concentrated in the hands of the two confederates. "Second-carding" is much simpler in bridge than in poker, as the dealer has to do it only once to put a desired card where it will help—either in his hand or his partner's.

Cold decks ordinarily are not resorted to, says Mr. Lenz, until a game is adjourned to a sharp's stateroom. A handkerchief is passed across the brow, or a nose is blown, and a new deck enters the game, although the victims don't know it.

Injured Seaman Is Rushed to Port

John Karerman, seaman aboard the United States Shipping Board steamer Sacco, was seriously injured today when a cable used in towing the disabled West Kyaks, of the same lines, snapped and struck him.

LATIN-AMERICA POLICY BARED BY STIMSON

Monroe Doctrine Is Discussed in a Warning to European Nations

New York, Feb. 7 (AP)—Secretary of State Stimson upholds the Latin American policy of the United States as a safeguard to the independence and welfare of the southern republics.

Its fundamental principles, he asserts, are the Monroe Doctrine, the agreement with Central American republics not to recognize any government established through revolution, and the embargo on shipment of arms to rebels opposed to an established republic.

EXPLAINS ATTITUDE

In two addresses last night—once before the council on foreign relations and later over a nation-wide hookup of the Columbia broadcasting System—Mr. Stimson defended the State Department's recognition of seven Latin-American governments set up by revolution in the past two years, and explained its attitude.

Referring to possible mistakes in the past, he said:

"In spite of these and all other aberrations, it is a very conservative statement to say that the general foreign policy of the United States during the past century toward the republics of Latin America has been characterized by a regard for their rights as independent nations, which when compared with current international immorality in other hemispheres, has been as unusual as it has been praiseworthy."

OUTLINE DOCTRINE

The Monroe Doctrine, he said, was "a declaration of the United States against Europe, not of the United States against Latin America."

The arms embargo, he continued, has broken up a "disgraceful" traffic between certain American munitions makers and rebel armies.

Full Bench Rejects Plea for Mandamus

The full bench of the Supreme Court today dismissed a bill in equity brought by Joseph H. Larkin against Walter C. Wardnell and other commissioners of Middlesex County. The dismissal of the bill upholds a similar action by a single justice of the same court. Exceptions of the plaintiffs to a denial of a petition for mandamus to compel the commissioners to award the plaintiffs a plumbing contract was overruled by the same court. Larkin & Co. were the lowest bidders for the plumbing contract in the new House of Correction, but their bid was not accepted by the county commissioners.

Washington, Feb. 7—The United States intends to maintain Marines in Nicargua until banditry has been suppressed so that work on the proposed interocean canal may proceed without interruption, it was learned today.

This is to be outlined in a new declaration of policy toward that Republic to be made shortly by Secretary of State Stimson in response to demands in certain Congressional quarters for the immediate withdrawal of the sea soldiers, it was learned.

Co-ed Liquor Quiz Causes College Row

Boulder, Col., Feb. 7 (INS)—A questionnaire on the use of liquor among students had today precipitated a melee of charges and denials among students and faculty of the University of Colorado.

A student publication questioned 42 students, purported to represent campus leaders, on their personal violations of the Eighteenth Amendment. Results showed 78 per cent of the students questioned drank. They also showed that 30.8 per cent of the good friends of the men questioned drank.

DAUGHTER OF BANKER GONE AFTER ROW

Mother of the Missing Girl Art Student Bares Quarrel With Stepfather

New York, Feb. 7 (INS)—Mrs. James MacDonough, mother of Florence Parker, vivacious art student, who has been missing from her Yonkers home for nearly two weeks, admitted today that a family quarrel had occurred the night before her daughter disappeared.

The girl, 22-year-old step-daughter of James MacDonough, wealthy banker, disappeared January 26.

"If she doesn't turn up," her mother said, "I'll tell what happened the night before. Every family has quarrels. Ours is no exception."

Another sidelight on the life of the missing girl was disclosed today by officials of the New York School of Design and Applied Art.

According to her mother, Florence left the house in Yonkers every day at 1 o'clock to attend classes at the art school. School officials, however, state that several weeks ago the girl started in a class which called for attendance on Saturday afternoons only and had attended but two sessions.

BANK HOLDUP IS FOILED BY GIRL

Charles Fisher, treasurer, was placing the bank's currency in the vault for the week-end.

The gunman, described as being about 50 years old and shabbily dressed had entered the bank about 15 minutes before the attempted holdup. To Fisher he had remarked: "Gosh. It's cold this morning," and then went over to one of the counters to await the departure of anyone who had come to the bank to make deposits.

When the bank was cleared of depositors the bandit stepped over to where Miss Twitchel was gathering the money with Fisher. He then compared the two to put their hands in the air.

Miss Twitchel let the money in her hand fall to the floor, in the instant, however, she recovered her composure and raced to the rear of the bank and sounded the vault alarm.

TRY TO HALT BANDIT

A number of men from houses and stores nearby rushed towards the bank. Two men reached the door just as the bandit raced out into the street.

They attempted to stop him, but were frustrated when the bandit halted for a moment and pushed the gun into the chest of his pursuer with the command, "Back away or I'll shoot."

The bandit then raced to a waiting auto and started off in the direction of Millis. A second man, the police say, had been waiting at the wheel of the car for return of the bandit. Persons summoned by the ringing of the vault alarm caught the number of the bandit car.

As soon as the bandit had fled from the banking rooms Fisher called the State police barracks at Framingham and also the Framingham police station. A detail of 10 State troopers raced to the scene followed by another detail of police from Framingham.

In the meantime word was also sent to Wrentham and Providence and details of troopers started in the direction of Holliston.

BANDIT CAR TIPS

The Wrentham troopers had just passed through Millis when one of their number espied the bandit car and then followed a wild chase. The bandit car had reached a point about two and one half miles outside of Millis when it skidded off the highway and turned over. The two men in the machine fled into the woods.

An hour after the attempted robbery it was reported that State troopers and police of a half dozen towns were scouring the woodlands of Millis armed with riot guns. All of the officers had been ordered to shoot to kill either of the bandits in the event that they resist capture.

The machine in which the robbers fled was identified as being the property of George E. Higgins, of Boston, who had previously reported the theft to the police.

Prince of Wales Croons Love Song to Newport Girl

CHOOSES HER FOR PARTNER AT DANCE

Daughter of a Naval Officer Captures His Fancy on Panama Visit

Panama City, Feb. 7—A pretty dark-haired brown-eyed American girl captured the fancy of the Prince of Wales, who danced with her most of last evening on the pavilion of the Union Club overlooking beautiful Panama Bay.

She is Miss Eleanor Nichols of Newport, daughter of Commander Newton Lord Nichols, in charge of the Balboa naval radio station. She spent most of the evening during the dance given for the two visiting princes in the arms of the Prince of Wales.

He bent low above her, while the bright moon shone over the Bay of Panama and the palms waved in the breeze, and sang a popular song played by the orchestra, "Without You," into her ear as they danced.

"He is the nicest person I know," declared Miss Nichols in recounting the thrills she experienced last night while dancing with the Prince of Wales.

Miss Nichols was chosen by the Prince as his partner for every number he danced.

Wales selected Mi.s Nichols as a partner almost as soon as he arrived at the club. Prince George, his younger brother, was especially attentive to Miss Cecilia Alfaro, pretty niece of the President.

Shortly after 1 o'clock both royal visitors had to leave and go aboard the steamer Oropesa, which sailed for Peru, the next stop in their South American tour.

Loretta Young May Ask for Divorce

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 7 (INS)—The film colony today discussed the reported impending legal separation of Loretta Young, film actress, and Grant Withers, actor, who eloped in an airplane a year ago to be married at Yuma, Ariz. Miss Young is expected to return here today to begin action. It was reported she will seek an annulment or perhaps apply for a divorce.

Racketeer Slain in Chicago Rum War

Chicago, Feb. 7 (INS)—The unending struggle for control in the liquor business of Chicago revived today in the death of another gangster. The body of "Little Joe" Tanzillo, 34, was found in an alley, his arms bound behind his back, his skull punctured by two bullets.

Tanzillo, police said, belonged to one of two rival distilling rings.

DETROIT GANG CHIEF SLAIN

Detroit, Feb. 7 (INS)—Traced to his arsenal hide-out by rival gangsters, Chester Lamare, alleged underworld czar and sought by police since last July when Gerald E. Buckley, crime-crusading radio announcer, was assassinated, was murdered here today by gangland hoodlums.

Lamare, aged 47, is also alleged by authorities to have inaugurated the famous "fish market" murders, so-called because the victims were were "big time" bootleggers posing as proprietors of fish markets.

Slayings of the latter men were said to have precipitated the underworld into a carnival of 17 gangster slayings in nearly as many day: last July. The latter were in turn climaxed by the sensational murder of the popular radio announcer, who was "put on the spot" in the Lasalle Hotel lobby.

Stars' Fine Gowns Sold to Hired Help at Only $1 Each

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 7 (AP)—Screen famous finery today adorned studio secretaries, waitresses and scrubwomen as a result of a house cleaning by a movie wardrobe department.

The house cleaning was by way of making room for new fashion creations. Gowns and wraps, 400 in all, worn by Ruth Chatterton, Kay Francis, Mary Brian, Clara Bow, and other stars in recent pictures, were sold to studio employes at $1 each.

A waitress in the studio cafe bought three gowns made for Miss Francis, one of Hollywood's style leaders.

NAME WOMAN IN MURCHIE SUIT

Judge William M. Prest of Suffolk probate court today allowed Mrs. Guy Murchie, wife of a former Harvard football player and now a prominent lawyer, to name Ethel Aldine Rose of Montreal in the divorce suit that she has filed against her husband.

The Montreal woman, according to Mrs. Murchie, is the divorced wife of a Montreal sportsman.

Mrs. Murchie charges her husband with infidelity in a Paris hotel last summer.

She said she had filed the divorce suit in Boston on the grounds that it would be recognized all over the world, whereas her husband had played the unsportsmanlike role of going to Reno last November to file suit for divorce.

Mrs. Murchie is the widow of Joseph H. Cotton, Boston manufacturer, and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bradley L. Eaton of New York. She married Murchie in Boston in 1920. They have no children. She also asks the court to allow her to resume her maiden name, Jane Cotton.

ANNULMENT REFUSED IN TEST CASE

Decision Interpreted to Mean Husband Has No Legal Recourse

New York, Feb. 7 (US)—For the first time in history, the high courts of New York State have decided that a wife cannot be required to bear children if she does not desire them.

Even though the wife promised before marriage to become a mother, even though she is physically qualified for maternity, even though maternity was made a condition of marriage, no woman can be compelled by her husband or by law to accept motherhood.

ANNULMENT ASKED

Mrs. Marion Kahn, 23, pretty Brooklyn stenographer, is the militant wife who won the unprecedented case. Married in 1929 to Alfred A. Kahn, she refused to consent to maternity.

Indignant, Kahn, who is 26, retained William Jacobs, attorney, to obtain a decree of annulment.

Mrs. Kahn promptly parted from the bridegroom and retained Joseph S. Robinson to prevent the annulment and vindicate her stand in opposition to motherhood.

Before Supreme Court Justice Edward J. Byrne, both sides fought out the issue. For the husband, Jacobs contended:

"He had the privilege of making terms of this contract, that she bear him children, if she can do so. Without children he had the right to believe that the marriage might not be successful, might be morally wrong and against public policy. If he did not wish to marry unless he could have the pleasure and experience that belongs to parenthood, it was his privilege not to do so."

NO LEGAL RECOURSE

On this, and the sweeping charge of fraud in the wife's conduct, Kahn's case rested. Attacking the wife, through Attorney Robinson, asserted that to annul the marriage would set a dangerous precedent through which many marriages might be collusively annulled. He admitted the contract and the bride's actions, but he empasized that since the Legislature had enacted no law authorizing annulment for sterility or refusal to bear children, the courts could not do so. He asked that the complaint of the husband be dismissed.

TINY RUNAWAYS HIKE 3 MILES

John Gaudette, 4, of 113 Hampshire st., and Joseph Sutherland, 3, of 105 Hampshire st., both of Cambridge, were today resting at home from the effects of their pilgrimage to the top of Bunker Hill at Charlestown, late yesterday.

John and Joseph decided to "see the world." John for his third time and set out early yesterday morning for parts unknown. Shortly after dark, a pedestrian on Bunker Hill st. noticed the two foriorn youngsters standing with their hand clasped, their eyes as big as saucers, and their beach pails at their feet.

Police of Charlestown station were notified and gave the boys a hearty supper; parents were called and shortly John's third attempt to "go places" was at an end. A rumpus was raised by John as he left the station, for the precious shovel of his beach pail was missing. After a diligent search the shovel was found, and quiet again returned to the station house.

Lottery Game Goes Broke as Gamblers Plug 'Leak'

New York, Feb. 7 (INS)—The policy game racket in Harlem, which has been steadily falling off during the last few months, was believed on the verge of insolvency today.

"Sure-thing" ramblers, according to reports current in Harlem, bet every dollar they owned or could borrow on what turned out to be the winning number—612—with the result that the lottery "bankers" were unable to pay off the winnings.

The lottery figures formerly were taken from the Clearing House reports, but since that organization began publishing its statistics in round numbers to foil the "racket," the customs receipts made public daily in Washington are used instead.

According to the operators of the police, yesterday's killing by the ramblers was not due to luck, but to a "leak" of confidential information in Washington. Holders of five and ten-cent lottery tickets gained to the tune of $53,090, it was reported, and the "bankers" were unable to pay off the "big plungers."

Gray Is Good and Going to Be Better

By ANN ARDEN

MODEL in THE WOMEN'S SHOP OF DELANO—American Staff Photo

COLORS NEGLECTED for several seasons frequently return to fashion, appearing so fresh and interesting that they are taken up with zest. Gray and beige are current examples of old favorites revived. The return of gray is especially interesting, in view of the fact that it has usually been considered a difficult color.

WITH FORMAL fashions dropping the interest to the waist and below the waist, it remains the pleasant duty of sports clothes to shout "attention!" and draw interested glances upwards once more to the higher neckline, contrasted and emphasized in color and fabric.

YOKES ARE fast becoming the crowning glory, so to speak, of the sports mode. They are the logical manner of spotlighting the interest and detail of an otherwise (and necessarily) simply made dress, one whose smartness depends upon its distinguished lines.

ON THE new sports dresses and blouses one frequently sees yokes, either in actual or simulated forms.

THE TRIG COSTUME pictured embodies many smart new features, and would be a delightful addition to the wardrobe of the traveller, the college girl, business woman, or for general daytime wear. It is a tweed-knit, one-piece frock, copy of Lucile Paray, in oxford gray; the skirt with inserted flare and interesting seaming. The deep yoke is finished by small upstanding collar, and side bow in lighter tone of gray. The tight under-sleeves are of this material, too, fastened with large button. A black suede belt has twin buckles. The Agnes turban is in gray knit tweed, its crossed sections held by two black and white quills on right side.

FASHION HAS gone up to her neck in smartness again. She shows in her recent offerings definitely high, concealing necklines.

IF YOU have wondered where the waistline would be, settle the question with the information that it will be where it has been. The same defining of the natural position is going to be apparent in clothes for spring. New knitted fashions give it the biggest play, with wide ribbing accenting its meaning in the mode.

PERSHING WILL AID BUTLER

Washington, Feb. 7 (US)—Three more attorneys today came to the defense of Maj.-Gen. Smedley D. Butler who will be court-martialed in Philadelphia, Feb. 16.

It was also reported that Gen. Pershing, Josephus Daniels, former Secretary of the Navy, and Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, former assistant naval secretary, will testify in Butler's behalf.

Maj. Henry Leonard, whom Butler first engaged, announced that Reland S. Morris of Philadelphia, Col. A. M. Holding of Chester, Pa., and Lieut.-Col. Jesse F. Dyer of the U. S. Marines will be associated with him.

Members of the Philadelphia commission, which once placed a tablet in the Navy Department building here testifying to the impartiality, courage and incorruptibility of the general, sent a petition to President Hoover, asking him to call off the court-martial proceedings. The White House made no comment.

Official Washington chuckled today over the way Col. Fred Taylor Pusey denounced Secy. of the Navy Adams for court martialing Butler when every one here believes it was President Hoover who ordered the trial.

Co-eds Tell Pastor He Must Apologize

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 7 (AP)—A denial that he had said Southwestern co-eds were improper costumes at a dance was made today by Dr. R. Girard Lowe, Memphis Presbyterian minister, as the girls waited for a demanded apology from him.

"I simply described the costumes," Dr. Lowe said.

This statement was made in answer to a demand from the co-eds that he make a public apology for his assertions before a meeting last Tuesday of the college directors.

KATHLEEN KEY VANISHES

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 7 (INS)—The film colony awaited the next move, if any, of the principals in the studio dressing room battle in which Kathleen Key, actress, was reported to have beaboored Buster Keaton, screen comedian.

Keaton declared he was ready for any eventuality.

"My conscience is clear," he declared.

The comedian said he had paid a $500 bet to the actress, that she had it photographed and used it over his head in an effort to obtain additional money.

To stop gossip, he said, he agreed to give Miss Key $5000, but tore up the check when she demanded $20,000 more.

Keaton said this made the actress angry and she struck and scratched him.

Although friends of Miss Key declared the actress was ready to take legal action against the comedian, she is reported to have left Hollywood.

FIVE HURT WHEN AUTOS CRASH

Five persons were slightly injured early today when an auto operated by Max Rothstein of 5 Rothwell rd., Brighton, crashed into the rear of a sedan driven by Elmer Flagg, of 97 Fuller st., Dorchester, at Commonwealth ave. and Charlesgate West, Back Bay.

In Rothstein's car, Miss Ivy Claire, 23, and Henry Graham, 50, suffered slight abrasions and contusions. In the sedan Richard Spellman, 24; John Kenny, 31, and Miss Grace Channel, 54, all received cuts and bruises. They were treated at City hospital and later sent to their homes.

Yale Rejects $25,000 Pillsbury Bequest

New Haven, Conn., Feb 7 (AP)—The Yale Corporation following a meeting today announced that it had declined the $25,000 bequest of the late Albert E. Pillsbury, whose will stipulated that the money was to be used for the purpose of "developing sound public opinion and action" against the modern feminist movement. This bequest has also been declined by Harvard, Princeton and Columbia.

GANDHI SPURNS M'DONALD BID

Allahabad, India, Feb. 7 (AP)—Prospects for settlement of the Indian question on a basis of Ramsay MacDonald's declarations at the round table conference are hopeless, Mahatma Gandhi told the Associated Press today.

"There is no hope of settlement," he said, "unless Sir Tej Mahadur Sapru has brought back more from the London conference than I have been able to find in the prime minister's declaration."

The weazened little man, who is almost a god to millions of Indians, made his announcement on the eve of a meeting with the Indian delegates to the round table conference.

"I don't think the death of Pandit Nehru will make any change in the attitude of the National Congress Party," he said. "Future events alone will show whether the civil disobedience campaign must be stiffened."

Gandhi hopes to go to America when he has won complete self-government for his country, he told the correspondent.

"I hope that God in his goodness," the Mahatma said, "May spare me to visit the land of liberty but I must first win liberty for the millions of silent toilers who follow me before I can cross the ocean."

Gov. Roosevelt Flays Hit-Run Driver

New York, Feb. 7 (INS)—It is the obligation of every citizen to arouse public opinion to the fact that "the hit and run driver is the worst of all criminals," Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt told members of the Automobile Club today at a luncheon at the Biltmore Hotel.

"This particular type of criminal deserves neither sympathy from prosecutors nor consideration for pardon from any chief executive. No type of being is more cowardly than the hit-run driver," the Governor said.

Cubans Held in Plot to Dynamite

Camaguey, Cuba, Feb. 7 (AP)—Twelve men were held incommunicado in prison cells here today charged with an attempt to dynamite three large American-owned sugar mills here.

Secret police said they found three powerful bombs on the premises of the mills. All those arrested were said to be members of the Cuban Communist Party.

Bakeries Sue to Make Mothers Buy

Writs Sought in Chicago Would Prevent a Boycott on Ten-Cent Loaf

Chicago, Feb. 7 (AP)—Owners of nine bakeries in the Humboldt Park district have appealed to the courts for protection against a group of women who call themselves "The Mothers' League," and whom they accuse of staging a boycott against their bread to force the price from 10 to 8 cents a pound loaf.

The movement, bakers say, is not a labor movement, since they employ union help.

The first legal step was taken when Superior Judge Denis E. Sullivan issued a temporary injunction to restrain picketing of the Northwestern Baking Company. Yesterday he issued similar injunctions on behalf of eight other bakeries.

FEBRUARY DRAMA HITS THORN STREWN PATH

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THE MID-SEASON hopes and expectations of the theaters have taken an unexpected turn for the worse. February, usually the brightest month of the year for producer, manager and actor, gives every promise of being the leanest in the drama's brave struggle to remain on steady feet. While the town is not stripped of excellent fare, the current menu seems to have been pared down to a distressingly fine point. The theater is still crying its wares, but the voice echoes faintly.

FOR THE FIRST time within the memory of our middle aged disciples of the arts, the theaters known as Erlanger's—Hollis, Tremont and Colonial—are dark, and will remain so until March 9, when The Theater Guild will send Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt to the Tremont in "Elizabeth, the Queen." The Shuberts, while not sharing so badly, have not been without their moments of anguish. It has been no simple, household chore to keep some of their temples satisfactorily tenanted. But for the moment, all that the playgoer may expect to find in first class drama bears the official Shubertian label. If the prospects are dull in some quarters they certainly are bright in others. So, why not make the most of any occurring consolations?

Nicholas Young

WITH THE DEPARTURE of "A Wonderful Night" from the Shubert tonight, and the concurrent finale in Chicago's grand opera distractions further up town, "Nina Rosa" remains the only musical play within the call of the bewildered playgoer. This excellent entertainment, however, will remain no longer at the Majestic but on Monday will take over the already well warmed stage of the Shubert. As the stage facilities at the latter playhouse are better suited to heavy productions, the reason for the transfer is made clear. With no musical opposition to stew tacks in its path, "Nina Rosa" should become one of those quaint fixtures that remains undisturbed while the rest of the theater world seeks safe and comfortable abode.

THIS RAPID TRANSIT of "Nina Rosa" will not, however, leave the Majestic long in darkness and despair, for on Monday, Feb. 16, an old friend will pass its gates and accept the town's hospitalities. D. W. Griffith's "Way Down East," famous in its day as the best of all rural dramas, and now re-incarnated with sound synchronization, will again present its throbbing story.

* * *

ORGANIZED BURLESQUE, at least that portion of it concerned with Mr. I. H. Herk's Mutual Circuit, will draw the shutters earlier this season. Mutual will fold up and call it a year on Saturday, March 14, upon which date, at the Old Howard, "The 20th Century Girls" will make a farewell gesture. As the Howard is more like a town institution than any other amusement palace in Boston, it may be taken for granted that on the Monday following Al Somerby will have the Howard Stock Burlesque Company in good working shape. It's an old custom at the Howard.

JAZZ 'CAMILLE' FALLS FLAT AS OPERA

By MOSES SMITH

The Chicago Opera Company presented last night at the Boston Opera House, for the first time in Boston, "Camille," by Hamilton Forrest. The opera, which is in a prologue and three acts, was originally produced in Chicago earlier in the season. Mr. Forrest wrote not only the score, but the libretto as well, adapting it from the familiar novel of Dumas Fils. Though the composer is an American, the opera is sung in French.

Once the opening of the prologue is passed, the time is changed from Dumas' day to the present. Costumes are not the absurd compromises seen in Verdi's "Traviata" (which was based on the same novel), but those of the year 1930, in Paris. Though the main outlines of the story and the principal characters are retained, the action is brought down to date. The first act is set in a fashionable gambling salon. In the second act, at Marguerite's house, there is enacted for the edification of the audience a jazz party. Conventional evening dress, rather than puffed up costumes, are used. In the third act, which takes place in Marguerite's boudoir, the tenor comes in dressed as he will go out later on to Huntington ave.

Some of the details of the action were sufficiently piquant to hold the attention. Otherwise, the play was substantially the melodrama, in a new version, that we used to see in "ten-twenty-thirty." Did the music enhance this drama, give a new reason for presenting it? It did not. The score is the most colorless in our experience in the opera house. The singers have nothing to sing; they can only tread musical water in dull recitative. The orchestra makes much sound and fuss but no music. The formulae of modernism appears in dress parade. Even the jass is not exciting. Try as we can to recall a single melodic line, the very germ of a melody, we cannot. Only the faint recollection of the sickly Parisian Waltz disturbs what would otherwise be a vacuum.

PROPER SHADING OF VOICE IS GREATEST ASSET ON STAGE

By MARY NASH
Star in "Barbara," at the Wilbur

THE VOICE, though not necessarily that reproduction of it which at times tends to distort it via the talking picture screen, is still the most potent weapon we thespians possess to wield the magic spell of illusion over any audience.

YOUTH, BEAUTY, grace and charm are all secondary to this primal requisite of those who have done or would do big things in the theater, because diction, inflection, quality and dialect can poignantly suggest all the aforementioned, almost without the need of physical attributes. Dialogue is naturally an asset to any performance, but in these reflections I refer specifically to vocal mannerisms.

Mary Nash

The schools of Garrick, Booth and Forrest long ago established the importance of voice. We know that long after lights and makeup were able to sustain her in any youthful characterization, it was her voice that kept Sarah Bernhardt on the stage.

Nowadays, who can think of Ethel Barrymore, Jane Cowl, Ruth Chatterton, Grace George, Otis Skinner, George Arliss, and so many others of our truly established performers, without realizing how completely and satisfactorily their voices express the personalities we love and admire to almost the extinction of any of their other great histrionic qualifications?

Strangely, however, beauty of voice is not always a requisite. Some distinctive quality is. There is nothing lovely, for example, about huskiness, and yet many of our prominent actresses have beaten a path to fame and glory and into public memory because of it.

Next to the voice I should say proper co-ordination of the hands—the fitting gesture, as it were—is of great significance. I am, therefore, a firm believer in early training in elocution and diction for all youthful dramatic aspirants and would even recommend, in addition, singing lessons to insure flexibility and proper breathing.

Looking Ahead

FEBRUARY 16—
"Way Down East," with sound synchronization, at the Majestic.
FEBRUARY 23—
"The Man in Possession" at the Plymouth.
MARCH 2—
"Elizabeth, the Queen," a Theater Guild production, at the Tremont.

'EMOTING' THE FORTE FOR THIS STAR

JOAN CRAWFORD is on the up-and-up grade. Her current picture, "Dance, Fools, Dance," feature on the screen at Loew's State, is her best, and in it she turns in her best work to date. Not so long ago, she was given little more to do than pose in the sunlight of more or less lingerie; then somebody gave her a part which required emotional output. She did well; so now her appearance as Bonnie, a rather wild young miss who turns to newspaper reporting when the family fortune goes kiting off, offers her the most fulsome chance she has ever had. She makes the most of it, which means there are better things around the corner for Miss Crawford.

The star is an actress with a big following, and "Dance, Fools, Dance" can be counted on to please all. The story has its weak spots; it is a mixture of society doings and gangland happenings. The author of the piece has worked into the mesh the tragic threads of two Chicago events, the gang slayings when seven men were mowed down by a machine-gun and the killing of a reporter.

When Bonnie's cash is gone, she turns to newspaper work, while her brother, played by William Bakewell, finds a place among the bootleggers. Bonnie is assigned to the task of getting information in the murder of a reporter on the same paper; so she becomes a cabaret girl. She succeeds, telephones in her facts, and later wins true love.

Real newspaper folk will smile at seeing their profession thus mirrored on the silver sheet; but such treatment is a way they have of doing it at Hollywood. The gangster portion of the photoplay is far better achieved. There are sequences brimful of suspense, and the picture proves highly entertaining.

Though the star fares best for the honors, she has excellent assistance from Isabella Vale, a new face for the screen; and from Messrs. Bakewell, William Bakewell, Russell Pratt and Natalie Moorhead.

STIRRING SAGA OF SOUND SCREEN IS 'CIMARRON'

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

MAGNIFICENT IS "CIMARRON," mighty in the majesty of its camera sweep, with a story that "packs the punch," acting of sterling quality—"Cimarron" is a masterpiece! Once in a rare while, out of Hollywood comes a picture one may refer to as an achievement. Such is the high praise that one must accord this Radio production, now giving RKO Keith's what is easily the best that 1931 has yet brought to us in films. "Cimarron" IS a true epic of the throated screen.

* * *

HERE IS A SAGA in sound of which the lover of true motion picture values can be proud, in which he can rest his faith in the future of the art — faith that after all its best must be said with the cameras, faith that the talking screen will in time work out its own destiny as a successful, to the old silent drama.

Richard Dix

"Cimarron" is an American saga, presenting trenchantly, on a spaciously tremendous scale, the vigor and thrift and valor of the pioneers, with an interwoven tale that is certain to make it a smashing triumph from the box office standpoint. Not often do the studios turn out a "natural," always a sure-fire hit; "Cimarron" is just that, and should be good for an indefinite run.

BASED UPON Edna Ferber's novel, the picture weaves golden threads that outshine the printed page, and fairly rings with reality and tense interest. The adept guidance of Wesley Ruggles as director vitalizes the work of Miss Ferber's pen, and by his deft handling of his cameras in the style of the Germans and the Slavs, often surpasses the original conceptions of the authoress. Other Westerns have been chiefly panoramic. Ruggles starts in with speeding action, crowds his sequences, establishes his atmosphere swiftly and surely. "Shots" here and there, swinging the camera at all angles! And Ruggles never lets up, but keeps on, holding the audience taut, and building up a master work, notable from the beginning to the fade-out. In telling manner he has painted for us the story of the winning of Oklahoma, its land rush, its oil wells, its boom towns, and the heroism of its settlers.

AND THE ACTING is as classy as the directorial effort. Richard Dix is the star, and to his lasting credit be it recorded that he has created his greatest role. His is Yancey Cravat to the life. Nor, it is pleasing to note, is he alone in rising to the need. Irene Dunne establishes her place among the true actresses of the screen, by her superb performance as Sabra. George Stone is splendid, and Estelle Taylor is very, very good. Among other good ones are Nance O'Neil, Roscoe Ates and William Collier, Jr. As a matter of fact, the entire cast is satisfactory.

* * *

THERE IT IS—"Cimarron," a marvelous photodrama, truly a great film! They come only once in a while, pictures of this kind; and none should miss this one.

LAUGHS MAKE WELKIN RING

There is nothing funnier than good farce. In the past few years the theater has been almost without real farce comedy, so bearing this in mind, Albert Bannister looked for such a play. It took him a few years to get the one that he wanted. When he first read it, he of once accepted, thinking that his troubles were over, but somehow or other they had just begun, as casting was next in mind and he had plenty of trouble picking the proper people.

He first engaged Theresa Maxwell Conover, delineator of farce comedy. But then he had to find actresses capable of playing the other two stepping sisters of two decades ago. The first was Helen Raymond, just back from England where she had been playing farce for the past three years. Then from Toronto, came word that Grace Huff was at liberty, not because she wanted to be idle, but because farce was no longer being presented. Miss Huff was quickly engaged as the wisecracking burlesque queen, Rosie LaMarr.

"Stepping Sisters" is from the pen of Howard Warren Comstock and will be presented in Boston, for the first time, at the Lyric Theater, next Monday evening.

Modern-Beacon

NEW NUMBERS ON PROGRAM

George Copeland returns to Boston for a recital in Jordan Hall next Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock.

George Copeland

The numbers on his program which will be heard here for the first time are: Andaluza, de la Vina; Danza de Chivate, Fittuiga; Serenata, Nin; Sacro-Monte, Turina. The remainder of the program is Fandanguillo de Mezzanillo, Turina; Homenaje a la jota, Nin; Sarabande, Martini; Pastorale-Capriccio, Scarlatti; Jeux Christus, Pillus Del, Bach; Rigaudon, Ravel.

MIDDLE NAME IS AGILITY

Benay Meroff has entered on his second week at the Metropolitan, and the nimble master of ceremonies is winning his audiences as few others have ever done. He is versatile in many ways, and scores with each appearance. The theater this week has another topnotch feature, Dick Ellington and his Cotton Club Orchestra, who are now stopping the show cold.

Also on the stage is a new Publix revue, "Imagine My Embarrassment," devised and staged by Fred Evans. Featured are the are the O'Gorman Bros., English music hall entertainers, in their first appearance in America; Alfred Latell and Sylvan Dell, comedy impersonations; Sammy Krevoff, buck and wing dancer; Babe Kane, personality singer and dancer, and the David Bines Girls.

ONCE PLAYED IN SAWDUST

The vaudeville bill at the Scollay, Monday, will be headed by Willie Solar, billed as the international entertainer in his own original offering. Solar has trouped with circuses, carnivals, road companies, revues and medicine shows. He has been a highlight in the Ziegfeld Follies.

Also on this bill will be Gifford and Gresham, "Two Boys from Hollywood," in comedy and singing; Berk, Floyd and Sawn in a singing and dancing specialty, called "In Vogue"; Rudell and Dunigan in a comedy sketch, "Such Is Life"; the champion "Scollayettes" in new song and dance routines and the Eno Jap Troupe of acrobats and barrel jugglers.

Fenway-Scollay

"Scandal Sheet," starring Clive Brook, Kay Francis and George Bancroft is the feature film attraction at the Fenway today, and at the Scollay tomorrow. The cast includes Lucian Littlefield and Regis Toomey.

'The Criminal Code' Is Featured at Bowdoin

Beginning tomorrow and continuing for the first half of the week the Bowdoin Square offers a picture and vaudeville bill of merit. Seven stage acts will be viewed. "The Criminal Code" will provide a rare screen treat. The companion picture is "Madonna of the Streets." A feature of the humorous type offers the Boy Friends in "Love Fever." Cabaret night comes on Wednesday with extra features on the program.

The New Plays

LYRIC—"Stepping Sisters," a farce by Howard Warren Comstock. The story of high life on Long Island and its amusing consequences. Included in the cast are Theresa Maxwell Conover, Grace Huff, Helen Raymond, Billy Lynn, Alice Davenport, Bert Cutler, George McEntee and Marjorie Dalton. Produced by Albert Bannister.

COPLEY—"See Naples and Die," a comedy by Elmer Rice. Presents the merry side of life as discovered by touring Americans. For this engagement, Rachel Hartzell joins the cast; other players are George Coulouris, Jessie Busley, Richard Whorf, Jack Story, Morton Stevens, Anne Seymour, Emile Belleveau, Josef Lovenon, Mark Kent, Barbara Hastings and Peggy Williams.

Absent-Minded Professor

FRANK MORGAN

'Merry Whirl' Troupe at Waldron's Casino

Another new face comes to Waldron's Casino. She is Lela Leis, with her "Merry Whirl" Burlesquers. Aiding her will be Kirby Kelly, Caroline Purcelle, Jane Vitale and Minnie Rowland. Comedy is provided by Vic Plant, Jack Erickson, Sid Gold, George Brennan and Sam Goodman. The vaudeville features include Bobby and Buster, Kora in Oriental dances, and the Mad Moujiks.

Plays Remaining

Mary Nash in "Barbara" at the Wilbur, (Second week.) Rollicking fancy goings-on in an artist's studio, during which an enamored model strangles the lady of his affections.

Frank Morgan in "Topaze" at the Plymouth. (Third week.) An interesting study in character development with its relation to honesty, conscience and whatever else may impede progress along the straight and narrow path.

* * *

"Nina Rosa," moving from the Majestic to the Shubert. (Third week.) Romantic, dashing musical play concerning the adventures of American engineers in the colorful land of the Incas.

IN SILKS, BUT NOT SATINS

To the Old Howard on Monday comes one of the best Mutual shows of the entire season. This company is known as the "Silk Stocking Revue," and under the direction of Frank X. Silk, will be found in the leading comedy role. For several years he has been hailed as the "King of Fun makers." The two big scenes with the offering are "Atta Boy, Convict" and "Baggage Officer." The show will introduce Jean Pearson, a prima donna. Others in the cast include Billie LaMonte, Yvonne Melford, Earl Root, Dorothy Maye and Armond Monte.

Dorothy Maye

SILVER STILL ARE TONES

John McCormack is a name to stir music lovers. Boston has always held a warm place for her adopted son. Never has this been better demonstrated than in the past week when the box office at Symphony Hall had been deluged with reservations for seats for the McCormack anniversary concert tomorrow afternoon.

Many of the men and women who will hear the great tenor on this occasion greeted him when he made his Boston debut 20 years ago. The performance Sunday will be in the nature of a gala reunion between the singer and his old and faithful friends. Many music lovers, out of sentiment, have reserved the same seats they had on the first visit of McCormach here in 1911.

SIGHTS UNDER PARIS ROOFS

Under the direction of George Kraska, known for his achievements in the field of foreign films, the Fine Arts theater in the State building on Massachusetts ave. at Norway st., will be re-opened next Saturday. The theater will present the finest of foreign films released in Germany, France, England, Italy, Spain and other European countries, where motion pictures have now begun to take their place at the head of the entertainment field.

The new venture will be inaugurated with the French film "Sous les Toits de Paris."

Boles and Velez Stars in Feature at the Park

The feature film at the Park, opening today, is "Resurrection," heralded as a great production, and based upon Tolstoy's famous story. The stars are Conrad Nagle and Lupe Velez. The secondary feature is "Under Texas Skies," with Bob Custer and Bill Cody; and the third is a new instalment of the thriller mystery serial.

FILM HAS THE GARBO LURE

Greta Garbo, the great, is glamorous and fascinating in her new talking picture, "Inspiration," which is now at Loew's Orpheum. On the stage, the vaudeville is diversified and diverting. The Fourteen Brickettes, vaudeville's famous girl jass band, are the headline attraction. Bobbie Grice, a petite miss of much versatility, leads the aggregation, guiding them through a program of novel arrangements. In addition to showing pleasing singing and dancing talents, the young ladies display remarkable ability as musicians.

Earl Dewey, surrounded by a company of youthful specialty stars, is presented in a lively miniature musical revue with many novelty features. The act runs the gamut of songs and steps and furnishes twenty minutes of excellent entertainment. Sim Moore and Pal are a riot in a hilarious pot of eccentric falls and the bill is filled out by George Lyons, singing harpist, and the McDonald Trio, aerial thrillers.

"Rasputin" Feature on Repertory Program

Westward Ho!

OUTLOOK BRIGHT

Los Angeles, Feb. 7—Winsome Sally O'Neil is on the Cruze lot playing second lead in "Salvation Nell." A very fine little trouper Sally is, too, and here is hoping this will be the beginning of a grand and successful year.

Let me tell you what happened to Lola Lane who had the second lead in "Salvation Nell" before Sally was given the job. Lola read that Helen Chandler had been chosen for an important role, so she decided she would punish Jimmie Cruze. When the call came for rehearsal there was no sign of Miss Lane. Repeated calls brought forth the information that Miss Chandler was being given the preference she would bow out. Now Jim Cruze is an old-time showman and a director who waits neither for time nor tide.

Louella O. Parsons

"All right," he said, "if she feels that way about it she needn't come back in life pictures at all."

Shows you just can't be too temperamental.

Sally has had a lot of hard luck. She knows that the best way to succeed is not to be high hat. Jim Cruze won't have any difficulty with her.

The new Pathe production chief has been chosen. He is none other than Charles R. Rogers who has grown up with the business and who for a man of his age, probably has as much knowledge of production values as any other executive in Hollywood. Charlie gets the title of vice-president in charge of all Pathe productions. I don't know whether "Mille" did it, but Hiram Brown and J. R. Schnitzer, who are here for the opening of "Cimarron" and important Radio picture deals, took a look at it and engaged Mr. Rogers. Should I have mentioned that Mr. Rogers takes E. B. Derr's place, and is the new man for Radio, Radio having recently purchased Pathe?

THOSE TWO Chicago boys, Kubec Glasmon and John Bright, have been invited to remain longer at First National. All their hopes, however, of doing something outside of gang stories are cruelly shattered. "Get to work," they were told, "on another story that will give Edward Robinson a good part." No sooner said than done. They turned out a gambling yarn in which Edward Robinson does another "Little Caesar." Of course, it isn't really a "Little Caesar" but it gives him the same type of characterizations. Mervyn Le Roy will undoubtedly direct Edward Robinson, that is if Robinson would like to have Mervyn Le Roy?

YOUNG RICHARD CROMWELL who blazed into sudden fame in "Tol'able David" is to be the hero in a deep sea picture. I wondered why until I heard it is the intention of Columbia Pictures not to "type" Young Cromwell. They want him to have a chance to play every kind of role. If he is to follow in Richard Barthelmess' footsteps he will have to be versatile for Dick has played everything from a gangster to a prince. Paul Gangelin, who is in the new crop of Columbia writers, is writing an original deep sea story.

LOOKING LIKE 'SIS' A BOON

Loretta Young, born Gretchen Young, is the youngest Young, having two older sisters, Polly Ann Young and Sally Blane, both of whom are in the movies. Loretta's accidental entrance into pictures and stardom is a favorite Hollywood story. Mervyn LeRoy, First National director, telephoned the Young home in order to secure Polly Ann, her sister, for a picture. Her brother answered the phone and told LeRoy that Polly was out of town and couldn't possibly return in time for the role. As an afterthought, and as he now explains it, more in jest, he said: "But Loretta is here and she looks much like her sister."

Loretta Young

Colleen Moore, in turn, sold the idea of having Loretta in the company to the studio executives and the result was a long term contract.

MARSHAL FOCH'S WAR MEMOIRS

PERSHING OFFERS TO HURL ALL U. S. TROOPS AGAINST FOE

PERSHING OFFERS AMERICAN TROOPS

Marshal Foch told in yesterday's instalment of the agreement at Doullens on March 26, 1918, that placed in his hands the unification of the British and French operations on the Western Front. He outlined the immediate steps he took to meet the great German drive that had begun on March 21, and which already had brought serious reverses to the Allied lines, particularly to the British Fifth army, under General Gough, in the vicinity of St. Quentin. In today's instalment Marshal Foch tells of the steps he took toward halting the German offensive and General Pershing's offer to throw immediately into the battle line the American divisions then available.

By MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH,
Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Armies During the Closing Phases of the World War.

Translated from the French by Col. T. Bentley Mott

AFTER SPENDING THE NIGHT IN PARIS, I left again on the morning of March 27 for the front, still accompanied by General Weygand and Colonel Destieker. Before leaving, however, I wrote a private letter to General Petain, insisting upon the line of action we should follow and asking him to explain its necessity to the French army. It is superfluous to say that, on the part of General Petain, as of all his subordinates, I found the fullest co-operation in framing our resistance along the lines I had indicated, and which still remained to be organized.

At first I went to Clermont, the headquarters of General Humbert, commanding the Third army. Here I met General Fayolle. I repeated my instructions, always inspired by the same idea; hold on at all costs, organize our positions, relieve no unit until the first result is achieved.

At 12:30 p. m. I left for Dury to see General Gough. The liaison between the British right and French left seemed to be insecured, due to the too hasty retreat of certain elements belonging to the British XVIII Corps. I therefore prescribed new measures to General Mesple, commanding the left units of the French First Army and I asked General Gough to make sure that the British XVIII corps received my instructions and carried them out.

Two Armies Hold
Tide of German Troops Hammers in Vain

From there I went to Beauquesne to see General Byng, commanding the British Third Army. He explained to me his situation. It did not cause him any anxiety for the moment and he signified to me entire agreement with me as to resisting on our present positions, employing for that purpose every means possible.

In the absence of a general reserve whose intervention might have restored the situation from the very start—the first thing to do was to end together as rapidly as possible the various fractions of the front that had been broken by the German attack and which had necessarily now become lengthened out.

It was indispensable, all—whether troops in retreat, or reinforcements comming up, and whatever their nationality—to operate in this task since all idea of relieving any of them was, for the moment, laid aside. If this were not done there could be no hope of stopping the enemy for several days.

Under these conditions, a rapid re-establishment of the front as well as a determined and simultaneous change of attitude on the part of the two allied armies, could only be brought about by the direct intervention of the Allied Supreme Command at the points still threatened.

On my return to Clermont in the evening, I learned that the Germans had debouched from Roye and, slipping in between the French First and Third Armies, whose junction had not yet been firmly established, had seized Montdidier. Although serious, this unfortunate occurrence was offset by certain favorable events which gave reason to hope that March 27th would prove the culminating point of the crisis, and that the danger which for a week had so seriously threatened the Allies would soon be passed.

The front of the German attack, far from extending, became lessened every day, thanks to the firm stand of the British Third Army, which, on the north clung fast to Arras, and of the French Third Army which, on the south, held the wooded heights of Ribecourt-Lassigny. Between these two dikes, the waves of the flood were steadily thinning out and getting more shallow every day.

The ground over which the enemy operated was the old Somme battlefield of 1916, a desolate and churned-up wilderness whose few remaining roads had been completely destroyed by the last battle, and this rendered difficult support and supply coming from the rear. An offensive thus weakened was bound to die out the day the Allies re-established an organized system of resistance in front of it. This day was approaching.

The French divisions which had been sent up as reinforcements were detraining without pause. The first of them were directed upon our First Army, the others were to form a massed manoeuver in the region of Beauvais to be at the disposal of the Supreme Command.

The British Fifth Army was given a new commander. Gen. Rawlinson, an energetic and able soldier, to restore its confidence. A large number of men (75,000) were arriving from England, three British divisions, already recompleted, had replaced fresh divisions in calm sectors and the latter were about to enter the battle.

A systematic organization was rapidly replacing the original confusion.

On March 28th, the enemy's main effort was directed against the Santerre plateau, between the valleys of the Somme and the Avre. The terrain was easy to traverse, and the Germans succeeded in gaining ground in the direction of Amiens, forcing back the right of the British Fifth Army which was still shaky; moreover, General Debeney had not yet been able to bring up enough troops to support it properly.

U. S. Offers Aid
Pershing and Bliss to Save the Day

In fact, the deep drive of the enemy toward Montdidier had forced General Debeney to send his first available troops in that direction. These had thrown themselves into the action with great vigor and had even retaken several localities—Nesnil-St. Georges, le Monchel, Assainvillers.

The fighting, however, was still fierce and the danger was not entirely past. In order to meet it, the commander of the First Army had to postpone the relief of the British forces south of the Somme. For the time being, in the wave of the British Fifth Army had to remain in line and reorganize on its positions.

But no matter what happened, the resistance along the whole front must be intensified, and I continued to impress upon everybody that there must be no exceptions to this inflexible principle. In obedience to it, General Gough, who had contemplated making his headquarters further back, remained where he was.

General Petain, renouncing all idea of a possible separation of the British forces from the Group of Reserve Armies, which would have brought about the loss of Amiens, instructed the latter to hold on to your present positions at any price.....drive the enemy back as soon as possible from in front of Montdidier and Amiens, and in every event maintain contact with the British Army."

General Fayolle moved his headquarters from Verberie to Beauvais so as to be nearer the danger point of the battle, the left of the French First Army, the place of junction with the British.

Meanwhile, the concentration of French reserves went on in the Beauvais region. In order to provide for their organization and command, General Petain had already withdrawn the staff of the Fifth Army from the Champagne front, and at a meeting held at Clermont on the afternoon of the 28th between General Petain, Monsieur Clemenceau, Monsieur Loucheur and myself, it was also decided to recall the staff of the Tenth Army from Italy.

A few hours before this meeting, General Pershing had come to see me and, with magnificent spirit, spontaneously offered to throw immediately into the battle all the instructed American divisions.

General Bliss, the American representative on the Versailles committee, animated by a similar sentiment, came to me, saying:

"We are here to get ourselves killed; if you want to use us, what are you waiting for?"

On March 29th the German attacks grew still more restricted, embracing it they did only that part of the front between Montdidier and Amiens-Peronne road. Although they failed almost entirely in the Montdidier region and only gained a little ground northwest of the town, they made a more appreciable advance between the Avre and the Amiens-Peronne road, where the British right wing and General Mesple's detachment were forced back to the line Marcelcave-Villerssur-Erables.

In spite of this retirement, the situation of the Allies continued to improve. Five fresh divisions had reached the First Army and the latter had already been able to relieve the whole of the British XVIII Corps (the right of the Fifth Army). The elements of the British Third Corps, which had been with the French Third Army, were now rejoining the British Army, except one division (the 58th), which was temporarily kept south of the Oise.

Field Marshal Haig was thus enabled to reconstitute his reserves and thereby to reorganize his Fifth Army without withdrawing it from the line. We had a conversation at Abbeville as to the vital importance of this last point; as a result General Rawlinson was instructed to maintain his front south of the Somme at all costs, which, in view of its reduced length, should not present any difficulty.

On the evening of the 29th I established my headquarters at Beauvais, where General Fayolle's headquarters had been functioning since morning and where General Petain himself established his on the next four days later.

Since March 26 I had been attending to the most pressing needs, going from place to place, visiting the various headquarters and laying down the immediate course of action which seemed essential for reconstructing the Franco-British front; but now that a systematic organization existed which could be counted upon to direct the battle of the Allied forces, the time had come to lay down the general rules by which our battle should be conducted.

With this end in view, I forwarded to the commander-in-chief general instructions which constituted a summary of the detailed directions I had given since March 26. The essential object to which the combined efforts of all were to be addressed remained "a close liaison between the British and French armies, to be assured especially by keeping possession of Amiens and then by regaining the unhampered use of that center."

This object was to be pursued, first, by holding and organizing a strong defensive front on our present positions; second, by the formation, north of Amiens for the British forces and northwest of Beauvais for the French forces, of strong reserves destined to counter an enemy attack, or undertake an offensive.

Foe's Drive Fails
Cannot Cut French and British Armies in Two

In order to form this massed maneuver as rapidly and in as great strength as possible, fronts not under attack should be unhesitatingly drawn upon.

But at the moment this instruction reached its destinations the enemy had begun to redouble his efforts. On March 30 he resumed and extended his attacks on both sides of Montdidier between the Amiens-Peronne highway and Lassigny. He was thus fighting a second battle before we had become firmly established on our positions.

However, in spite of his numbers and the material he put into play, the results he achieved were even less than those of the previous day. It was only in the valley of the Ayre, toward Moreuil, and around Rollot-Roye-Mat, east of Montdidier, that he gained any ground.

On the following day, March 31, he renewed his attacks, but he was nailed in his place by the resistance and counter-attacks of the Allies, and he was only able to mark a slight advance in the bend of the Luce, between Moreuil and Marcelcave. This little corner, threatened a particularly sensitive point in the direction of Amiens itself, where the Franco-British liaison was as yet by no means secure.

The situation was met by sending the British Fifth Army enough reinforcements to make sure of its holding fast on the positions it occupied, and, in addition, the French First Army extended its front up to Hangard.

The battle of the Avre-Luce-Amiens appeared to be coming to a close. On the evening of April 1 it was possible to write to the Prime Minister:

"The enemy's initiative seems now blocked and paralyzed."

But, as a matter of fact, after a short respite, the German on April 4 again delivered violent attacks on the British Fourth Army (Marshal Haig had decided that the Fifth Army, reorganized under the command of General Rawlinson, should be called the Fourth Army) and the French First Army between the Somme and Montdidier.

The center of the British Fourth Army was forced back on Villers-Bretonneaux and the French First Army, on its part, was driven in for a considerable distance on the Rouvrel plateau. This loss was partly retrieved by counter-attacks carried out on the following day, April 5th.

But, the fact of vital importance was that the liaison between the two armies in the region of Hangard had been firmly maintained and in order to definitely assure it, General Rawlinson was requested to employ all available reserves and artillery to support the French left.

In order to emphasize our determination not to give ground, I asked Marshal Haig to suggest to General Rawlinson that he do not move his headquarters further back, as he had signified his intention of doing.

In the course of this day Clemenseau, Loucheur, Winston Churchill, and finally the President of the Republic, all came to see me at Beauvais. This gives some measure of the anxiety which reigned among the Allied governments.

From this time on, the Germans could no longer expect imporatnt result from the battle. In the face of the increased strength presented by the Allies, their attacks became more and more difficult and costly, and they finally found themselves forced to stop them without having been able to achieve the strategic results aimed at. The French army had not been separated from the British army.

In order to finish on a note of victory, on the following day, April 6, undertook the capture of the strip of ground occupied by Hill Dickson, in Hartford County Superior Court yesterday. She was granted a divorce from Carlos H. Mason, commodore of the Connecticut Outboard Association and national outboard racing champion in class F last summer. The court ordered the sportsman to pay his wife $10 allmony per week.

THE MYSTERY OF GERALDINE

By ANTHONY ABBOT

Truth Drug Last Test Given to Maskell

CHAPTER 19

The Truth Drug

DOUGHERTY RAN his thick hands through his mop of ruddy curls; his blue eyes rolled upward, and he swore.

"The truth drug!" he moaned. "More bunk. And you are out of your senses? We have got a case against that fellow now—one that will convince any 12 men you pick. The job is done, and the guy is just about ready to kick in. And then you—"

"Stop making speeches," said Thatcher Colt, with a glance of enjoyment up from the bowl of his pipe. "Suppose Maskell is innocent?"

"Innocent as Cain! Innocent as Landru! Innocent as Jack the Ripper!"

The district attorney began marching up and down the room, talking to himself and checking off, on his pudgy fingers the various points established against Dr. Maskell. Halting suddenly, he thrust forward his head and barked:

Proves Guilt

"What makes you think Maskell might be innocent?"

"This lie detector chart, for one thing."

"Why, if your chart proves anything at all, it proves his guilt!" howled Dougherty.

"No. It proves merely that he lied," corrected Thatcher Colt. "And look here—at the real mystery! The reactions of Dr. Maskell to questions about the murder itself were absolutely negative. See where we mentioned axe, blood, body, grave—everything nonsense you could think of —the chart remains perfectly normal."

"The fellow has himself in hand, that's all."

"But no—at other questions he has not himself in hand at all. Every reference to the house on Peddler's rd., for instance, makes him nervous."

"You caught him off his guard."

Thatcher Colt patiently shook his head and smiled.

"No, Dougherty. Observe that I went over the same ground not once, but several times. Undoubtedly the doctor is hiding something from us—I don't think it would take a mind-reader to guess a part, at least, of what it is—a mysterious, unnamed lady, whose very existence the physician is prepared to deny. Suppose the doctor is innocent, but rather than involve her in the matter, the gallant doctor has lied. He is telling some of the most maladroit falsehoods and has involved himself dangerously, yet he seems fatalistically determined to go to the electric chair, rather than snitch."

Dougherty sniggered and shook his head as if he considered the police commissioner a helpless case.

"The house was a place of rendezvous, all right—but there was no mystery about the lady. She was Geraldine Foster and when Maskell got tired of her he chopped her up with an axe."

"But just suppose it was another woman—then what?"

"Why suppose it? Why should any man go to such preposterous lengths to shield any woman?"

Dougherty shrugged his shoulders and glanced at the watch on his wrist.

Word Given

"It is eleven o'clock. I gave you my word that I would not act until midnight. Clearly Maskell is guilty as hell. Why not arrest him here and now?"

Thatcher Colt gravely shook his head. Out of a walnut case he brought a small black bag, like that of a medical man. This he placed on the table where the lie detector machine had rested. Then, by the buzzer in his chair he recalled the two policemen who presently led in to us again the still firm-jawed but very pasty pallor Doctor Humphrey Maskell.

"Doctor Maskell," he exclaimed, "if you are a murderer, you are a wonder. You have shown colossal nerve to submit to this examination."

The doctor smiled. Acute as he was, he did not realize the trick that was being played upon him. Criminals and honest men, too, until told they are bold and clever. Vanity is one of the greatest weaknesses of crook and saint alike.

"Is your nerve still good?" asked Thatcher Colt, with a trace of skepticism in his low voice.

"What is it now?" asked the doctor, the contempt again coming into his tone. "That by fire and water, like the ancient savages? Or divination by birds? Or what?"

"Have you ever heard of scopalamin" asked Thatcher Colt.

"Yes. Erroneously called the 'truth serum' in the newspapers."

The doctor folded his hands and studied Thatcher Colt keenly.

"Why should I subject myself to a charlatan's drug when I don't have to?" he snapped. "As I understand it, you have no legal right to use the machine or drug on me? I think I have been too acquiescent—now I am about fed up."

Thatcher Colt nodded.

"Correct," he admitted. "You are not compelled to do what I ask. Neither the lie detector nor the truth drug have ever been

TWO GALLANT MILTON YOUTHS GO TO JAIL FOR GIRLS

City to Fight 'L' Ouster of Lincoln Wharf Pumping Station

ROURKE HITS ORDERS TO MOVE OUT

Cites Fire Hazards in High-Pressure Area as Making Plant Necessary

Public Works Commissioner Joseph A. Rourke and Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaughlin were notified today by officials of the Boston Elevated that the city's high pressure pumping station, now on leased property of the Elevated at Lincoln Wharf, Commercial st., must be vacated by June 1.

Officials of the Elevated say they need additional space there for a generating station.

Commissioner Rourke announced, upon receipt of the information, that he wanted to fight abandonment of the pumping station, and would enlist the services of the board of fire underwriters.

HITS SHORT NOTICE.

"If we were threatened with two large fires at the same time within the high pressure area this service could not respond and we would have to depend largely on the motor equipment of the fire department to pump water," said Commissioner Rourke.

"We resent this indecently short notice to abandon one-half the pumping capacity of the high pressure fire system, which has done so much to reduce the conflagration hazard in this city, and particularly is it to be condemned when the affairs of the Elevated are supposed to be directed by a board of public trustees."

SCORES "L" STATION

"The present critical and disappointing condition dates back to the administration of Andrew J. Peters, when these two stations were installed and went into commission in 1922.

"Conditions at the Elevated pumping station are congested and disgraceful for the men who work there, and in the summer the place is unbearable from excessive heat.

"If the Peters administration had proceeded with the construction of a pumping station in North End paving yard, adjoining North End Park, the city would not be in the present predicament. That site is not now available and it would be a problem to get a location now on the easterly water front for such a station."

Week-End of Winter Sports for Simmons

ELEANOR WHITE RUBY WADHAMS HELEN CRAWLEY EDNA KURDT

SKIS, SLEDS AND SKATES were included in the equipment that Simmons College students took with them, as they left late yesterday for a week-end of winter sports. They will ski and skate and do a lot of sled work at the Girl Scouts' Camp, at Cedar Hill, in Waltham. With the skis are Eleanor White, Milton, and Ruby Wadhams, Hartford. Chaperoning that giant toboggan is Helen Crawley of Needham, and let's not forget Edna Kurdt of Brooklyn, with the skates in hand. (Staff photo.)

BOYS STEAL CAR TO AID GIRLS

Milton Youths Land in Jail After Crash in Randolph and Quiz by Police

Chivalry of two Milton youths, who tried to relieve three maidens in distress early today, cost one of the youths severe gash in the head, necessitating 10 stitches, and landed both youths in jail charged with larceny of an automobile.

The youths are Stanley F. Gorka, 19, of 13 Blue Hill ave., and James L. O'Neil, 18, of 5 Austin st.

While walking through Mattapan sq. early today, Gorka and O'Neil met three 18-year-old Brockton girls who were trying to thumb an auto ride to their home town.

"We'll take you home," said the Milton Gallahads.

Walking a short distance to Bobolink st., they appropriated the automobile of Harry C. McMann, standing in front of his home, according to police.

Returning to Mattapan Sq. they invited the girls to hop in, which they did, after bestowing much praise on the youths. At Randolph the gas gave out. Gorka left the machine and told his troubles to Chief of Police Patrick J. McDonnell, who happened along in an auto.

"I'll give you a helping hand," said the chief. He took Gorka to the nearest gas station, a mile away.

While Chief McDonnell and Gorka were on their way for gas another machine hit the parked car in which O'Neil and the three Brockton maidens were sitting. O'Neil was thrown out and severely cut. He was treated by a Randolph physician.

Upon his return to the scene of the accident, Chief McDonnell began to ask questions and as a result turned the Milton youths over to the Boston police, who preferred charges of larceny against them. The girls, unhurt, resumed their homeward way without making their identity known.

SIX OVERCOME BY GAS LEAK

Two babies were overcome and four others were partly overcome by illuminating gas today which leaked from a broken pipe in the cellar at 7 Letterfins ter., Dorchester. The lives of three families in the building were endangered.

Those overcome by fumes were George Penson, 2 years, and Erlene Penson, eight months.

Those partially overcome were Mrs. Leo Penson, mother of the above children; Miss Ruth Crinton, 17; Miss Catherine Hansen, 24, sister of Mrs. Penson, and Mrs. Robert Coulsey.

The two children and Miss Crinton were treated at City Hospital and later permitted to return home.

Leo Penson, father of the children, was awakened by the gas fumes and aroused other persons in the house.

Miss Crinton hurried from the house to the office of a physician, but, weak from effects of the gas, fell on Woodcliff st., two blocks' distant from her home, injuring her knee and hand. The fall partly revived her and she staggered along to the doctor's office, only to find him absent. A neighbor took her home in an automobile, where the Penson children and their mother were picked up and all removed to City Hospital for treatment.

Employes of the gas company repaired the broken pipe.

GOW PRAISES SUCCESSOR

A swan song of former Postmaster Charles R. Gow to his successor, William E. Hurley, urges the personnel of the Boston postal district to "transfer" to the latter "the loyal support and consideration" which he himself received.

"It is with regret that I take my voluntary departure from the office of postmaster of the Boston postal district," said Gow. "I have become greatly attached to many individuals among you and am also conscious of the loyal contributions which the rank and file have made in an endeavor to insure the success of my administration.

"You are fortunate in having as my successor one who has spent his working life among you; one who understands your aspirations and everyday problems, and who may be relied upon to treat them sympathetically.

"Mr. Hurley has won his promotion to this high honor by virtue of his conscientious devotion to duty, unswerving loyalty to those above him, and by the promotion of efficiency and character. By emulating his example in this respect, others will advance their personal interests in a similar manner."

Boy Given Sentence in Library Theft

In an effort to stop thefts of books from the Boston Public Library, a suspended sentence of a year at Shirley Industrial School was given in Boston juvenile court to a 16-year-old boy whose name is withheld. The boy admitted stealing 22 books from open shelves at the public library and selling them.

Dog Bites West End Man While at Play

A four-inch laceration in the palm of his right hand, received while playing with his pet dog, landed Edward DuBremil, 61, of 11 Revere st., West End, in Massachusette General Hospital last night.

Changes in Postal Stations Announced

Changes in Boston postal contract stations announced today are: Mrs. Mary E. Sagarino, appointed clerk in charge of station No. 13 at 82 Ferry st., Everett; John Dorenbaum, appointed clerk in charge of station to be located at 348 Walnut st., Newtonville; Isidore Turkanis, resigned as clerk in charge of station at 822 Beacon st., Back Bay district, Boston; Samuel J. Rabkin, appointed clerk in charge of station No. 111, 822 Beacon st., Boston.

$50 Weekly for News and Picture Tips

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American offers the opportunity. Each week $50 in prizes will be given for news and picture tips telephoned in to the News Tip Editor, at Liberty 4000.

What is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an interesting picture is to be obtained, that an accident or an unusual event has happened, that there is going to be a business merger? That's a news tip.

If you have a camera, take a picture of some news event, while it is happening. Bring your action pictures to the American quick. Delay often spells them for use.

There will be $15 given weekly for the best or the most unusual event news tip received; $10 for the next best; $5 for the next best, and $2 prizes for each of the 10 next most valuable tips.

NEW INCREASE IN FLU CASES

Statistics announced today by Deputy Health Commissioner Joseph Monahan reveald an increase in the number of cases of lobar pneumonia over the corresponding weeks of the past five years. Deaths from this disease also took a marked jump. Influenza cases also climbed, while deaths from "flu" remained about normal.

Lobar pneumonia cases for the week totaled 71, with 33 deaths, against the average of 53 cases and 17 deaths. Influenza cases for the week totaled 101, with four deaths. The average is 22 cases and two deaths.

Cases reported today were nine from influenza and no deaths, and 18 cases with six deaths from lobar pneumonia. Monahan repeated his assertions of previous weeks that there is no epidemic of either disease.

Chelsea Factory Damaged by Flames

Fire of undetermined origin almost entirely destroyed the building occupied by the Boston Chair Company, 6 Sixth st., Chelsea, early today. Sparks from the burning structure ignited a warehouse next door. A single alarm was sounded. No one was in the building at the time the blaze broke out. Damage was estimated at $5000, while the warehouse suffered about $400 damage.

GARRETT JUROR 'THREATENED'

A threatening letter, received this morning, was turned over to Dist. Atty. William J. Foley today by Albert I. Fishel, foreman of the jury that tried Oliver B. Garrett, his wife, and Miss Lillian V. Hatch.

Both Fishel and the district attorney refused to divulge the contents of the letter. Fishel said it "meant nothing" to him and he considered it as coming from a crank.

Fishel again denied the allegation of Benjamin H. Farrar, one of the Garrett case jurors, that the jury voted to find Mrs. Garrett and Miss Hatch "not guilty."

"From what has been reported to me by my assistants, who were present in the courtroom at the time Judge Patrick Keating ordered the clerk of the court to ask a number of questions of the jury foreman, Albert I. Fishel, I am satisfied that Mr. Fishel gave sincere, honest and truthful answers to all the questions asked of him."

This statement was made today by Dist. Atty. Foley, in commenting on statements made by Farrar.

Dist. Atty. Foley further said "Albert I. Fishel, foreman of the Garrett jury, made his answers to the series of questions asked of him by direction of the court through the clerk, William Prendible, just previous to dismissal of the jury."

Court in Tribute to Memory of Cler

Memorial services were held in Roxbury district court today for the late Maurice J. O'Connell, for 37 years clerk of the court, who died last July. The services were under the direction of presiding Judge Albert F. Hayden, who responded to the eulogies offered by Judge Joseph N. Palmer, Judge Timothy J. Ahern, Attys. Charles J. Quirk, Edgar P. Benjamin and Walter R. Meins. Following the ceremonies, a picture of O'Connell was hung in the library. A gold placque containing O'Connell's name, and the dates 1848-1930, was attached to the bottom of the picture frame.

Boy Suspect in 'L' Holdup Still Held

Employes of the Boston Elevated today failed to identify the 22-year-old Charlestown youth held by the police for questioning in connection with the hold-up of Charles Symonds, a paymaster of the road, at Sullivan sq. terminal last Wednesday, when $12,000 was stolen. The police held the youth for further investigation.

WHEN JOHN McCORMACK SINGS

WHEN McCormack sings,
When McCormack sings—
My thoughts mount and fly away
As if on silvery wings.

They take me over ocean, over hill and over dale,
They set me down in Ireland by the cabin in the vale.
I see my dear old mother and my heart just thrills with joy,
I'm as happy as a lark and as carefree as a boy—
When McCormack sings.

When McCormack sings,
When McCormack sings—
I find myself a dreamin'
Of the queerest, dearest things.

I wander down the lanes I trod in days of long ago,
I see the smiling faces of the friends I used to know,
'Fore my face the mists arise—'tis the peat smoke in my eyes,
And I wipe away the tears, tears of joy and glad surprise—
When McCormack sings.

When McCormack sings,
When McCormack sings—
Sure something keeps a pullin'
Softly on my old heart strings.

Oh, the mem'ries he wakens! Oh, the joy and the gladness!
Oh, the sweet sorrows he stirs! Oh, the sighs and the sadness!
Accompanying those golden notes, rising and falling,
Acushla! Acushla! 'Tis your dear voice I hear calling—
When McCormack sings.

DESCENDING FROM the realm of song to the circle of sock and leaving the Irish songbird until we can hear his golden notes once again at Symphony Hall tomorrow afternoon, that Jewish spalpeen from Chicago, Kingfish Levinsky, who knocked Jack Gagnon crosseyed in the Garden, last night, is the best Jewish big fellow we have seen since Joe Choynski.

King Levinsky

When we say Levinsky knocked Gagnon crosseyed we mean it literally. It was not until half a minute after the stalwart French-Canadian returned to his corner that Gagnon's orbs returned to normal. The only other boxer we ever saw knocked crosseyed was Micky Shannon by Al Roberts. Two hours later Shannon died in a Newark hospital.

Eddie Picken, Dartmouth basketball star, doesn't like alarm clocks. He kicked one out of the window with his bare foot, rotate the other morning. Cut his foot so badly he now is hors de combat, as they say in our best sellers.

THE COMING MEET of the Boston A. A. will be a banner affair, but the real Blue Ribbon games of the indoor season is the annual Millrose A. A. meet in Madison Square Garden, New York, tonight. Ray Conger, pushed by Leo Lermond and a great pack of milers, will be out to get a deciding leg on the Millrose mile trophy. Our own Russ Chapman will measure strides with Sera Martin of France, world's 800-meter record-holder, and a fleet field of fliers. Our Mary Carew of Medford tackles Stella Walsh, sprint queen, and the flying fours of Harvard, B. C. and other New England institutions will be seen in the relays.

Babe Ruth

WHATEVER HOMERS Babe Ruth loses through the adoption of the new rabbitless ball—some of the magnates say that even if it doesn't bounce so far, the seams make it look like a rabbit—he hopes to make up through the American League's adoption of the National League's system of declaring a drive fair or foul according to where it goes over the fence.

Babe claims that heretofore many American Leaguers were robbed of deserved homers through the system of declaring a ball foul if it curved foul when still in sight but over the wall.

Pete Herman, former bantam champion, runs a night club in New Orleans, his home town. He is blind . . . Kid Murphy, another former bantam champion, also is blind. He helps manage his son and other boxers in Trenton, N. J. . . . Mike and Tom Gibbons are in the real estate and insurance business in their home town, St. Paul. . . . DAVE INGALLS, one of the greatest center ice men that ever played for the Boston A. A., now is assistant Secretary of the Navy. . . . Bobby Kosch, who won fame and put Boston high to star in amateur and professional hockey, now is managing the Buffalo club of the International Hockey League. . . . "Pop" Conley, first Canadian player imported by Charles F. Adams when he had the old Irish-American A. C., now is a linotype operator on a Pittsburgh paper. . . . NOW THE NOTRE DAME system has entered wrestling. Jumping Joe Savoldi will try out some of Rockne's pet holds against Gus Sonnenberg, Ed George, Jim McMillen and other college grapplers favoring Warner and other systems.

Already Florida usurps the sport's spotlight. Capt. Campbell, English speed devil, drives his roaring Bluebird II one mile over the Daytona Beach sands at a rate of 245.75 miles, the fastest any human has traveled on terra firma. With Maloney and Carnera soon starting training and almost a dozen major league clubs piloting training camps there, Florida will monopolize the sports news by the end of the month.

Wilbert Robinson

AT DAYTONA we once watched a world's record-shattering feat that failed. Your Uncle Wilbert Robinson of the Brooklyn Dodgers attempted to catch a baseball dropped by Mike Kelly from an airplane piloted by Ruth Law, the aviatrix, at a greater height than the Washington Monument from which Gabby Street had caught a league apple.

The ball turned out to be a grapefruit. When Kelly reached the banque he found he had forgotten to bring a ball. Espying a crate of grapefruit, Mike selected a large and luscious, not to say golden, ball. At 1000 feet you can't tell a watermelon from a carbuncle, let alone a grapefruit from a baseball. What that grapefruit did to Uncle Robbie!

George Spitz, N. Y. U. freshman, has been clearing 6 feet 5 inches in training. That kid will come in mighty handy in the high jump at next year's Olympics.

OFF WITH the merry old wrestling war. In retaliation for Ray Fabiani of the Curley-Londos forces invading Boston, the pet preserve of the Sandow-Bowser combine, the latter wrestling "trust" thrusts into Curley's ballwick next Wednesday with a Sonnenberg-Baffert bout in the old armory of the Fighting Sixty-Ninth.

Who do you think is back of the professional tennis campaign? M'sieu Jaques Curley, the Mahout of Wrestling. With Tilden, Hunter, Koseluh and others, Jaques hopes to rake in as much filthy lucre as he has with his herd of performing pachyderms.

WINCHESTER BEAUTY THRILLS DEAH OL' LUNNON

MARIBEL VINSON, Boston's figure skating champion has deah ol' Lunnon by the ears. Three medals in one week, one of them the British Women's Championship, fell before the speed and skill of the Winchester miss. She is the daughter of a Boston lawyer and niece of Dr. Alfred A. Cliff, Huntington ave. doctor. Maribel now is in training in London for the International Figure Skating championships which will be held later this month in Berlin. Miss Vinson twice has won the women's singles skating championship of the United States. If she continues on her present path she will be a favorite to capture world honors in the Olympic games. The Olympic events will be held next Winter at Placid, New York. A win for the Boston girl then would capture her the highest kind of sports distinction. Olympic laurels are prized trophies and rightly so. For an Olympic victor must be a real champion.

The Boston Tigers clash with the Philadelphia Arrows at the Garden tonight in a game which involves third place in the Can-Am League and which gives the Tigers their last chance to stay in the race for a playoff position.

In their last four games, the Philadelphians have beaten New Haven and Providence and the Tigers.

Herb Gardiner's work has turned the fall-ender into a possible winner.

Gardiner will bring to Boston a good team. Maurie Roberts, the Jewish lad from Somerville, will be in the nets.

Manager Powers of the Tigers will carry on with his regulars. Johnny Loucks, who missed two games on account of the grippe, is well again.

MOORE SIGNS WITH SOX

By JOE CASHMAN

Wiley William Moore, the Red Sox draft prize, forwarded his signed contract to President Bob Quinn today.

Moore, old as ball players go when he broke into the big leagues with the Yanks back in '27, is now close to 34 and the oldest player on the Sox roster, yet he won 22 games with St. Paul in the American Association last year and is expected to prove a great help to the natives in the coming campaign.

When Wiley first came up he brought along a "sinker" which stood the best hitters in the business on their heads, and his great relief pitching, more than anything else, was responsible for the pennant and world's championship which the Yanks won in '27.

Then his arm went dead. He couldn't throw the "sinker" or anything else and after hoping in vain for two years that he would regain his stuff, the Yanks sent him back to the bushes.

As suddenly as he had lost it, he regained the use of his wing as soon as he reached St. Paul and won the sensation of the circuit all last season.

He not only threw his "sinker" as well as ever, but displayed many other deliveries that he had never shown before, and no less than six big league clubs battled the Sox for him in the draft.

YALE SEXTET BEATS GREEN

Hanover, N. H., Feb. 7 (INS)—Yale defeated Dartmouth 6 to 1 in a varsity hockey game here today before a carnival crowd of 2000 fans. It was the third time this season the Bulldog has triumphed over the Indian.

Frank Todd, wingman of the Eli sextet, was the star of the game, caging three goals, one in each period. McLennan, Fletcher and Mills were other scorers for Yale.

Dick Jackson scored Dartmouth's only goal in the second period and saved them from a whitewash. The Yale team completely outclassed and outskated Dartmouth the entire game.

BOSTON GIRL WINS TITLES

London, Feb. 7—Maribel Vinson, 18-year-old Boston, Mass., girl, is training here for her final European skating venture of the year, the international championships in Berlin. Miss Vinson already has won, all at the same time, the three important medals given each year by the National Skating Association of Great Britain.

Miss Vinson, in her gold medals competition, made the highest score ever recorded in similar skating events in England.

The Boston girl is the daugnter of T. M. Vinson of Winchester, Mass., and is a student at Radcliffe College. Miss Vinson holds the women's singles skating championship of the United States.

After the Berlin skating events are over Miss Vinson will return to the U. S. to continue her studies at Radcliffe.

American Had Right Dope on Changes in Baseballs

Confirmation of the BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN'S exclusive story that the new American League ball was different from the new National League ball was received from President Barnard of the American League, today. Bob Quinn, Red Sox chief, will be interested, for all along Bob has declared the two balls would be identically the same. President Barnard says:

"The American League ball has heavier, raised stitching, but no thicker cover. The National League ball has a thicker cover. We are not striving to be different than the National League. Each is seeking the same end. If the National League ball proves to best serve the purposes sought the American League will adopt it. I believe the National League will later accept our ball if they find we best have solved the problem."

N. Y. POLO TEAM TO PLAY HERE

Tim Clark, leader of the Battery A team, has made an announcement important to polo fans. Clark has received word that the 24-goal metropolitan indoor team, of which Lieut. McDonald Jones is a member, will appear in Boston, March 7.

The Indoor League officials, Maj. Philip Brown and Col. Charles Furber, have sanctioned the visit of Los Nanduces, as the New Yorkers call themselves.

The Class A match, between Battery A and Harvard varsity, scheduled originally for March 7, has been postponed until later.

Pony polo fans will flock to the Commonwealth Armory tonight; to see a doubleheader in the Boston Indoor Pony Polo League which features the debut of Tim Clark's Battery A team in a Class A match with the Westwood Club.

Harvard has registered three victories in its three starts which will be quite a handicap for the Battery team to overcome.

Riding on the Battery team are Carroll Redd at No. 1, John "Slim" Walsh at No. 2 and Clark at back. Westwood will mount Johnny Hopewell No. 1, Henry Westphalinger or Richard Walker at No. 2 and Captain Sharp at back.

Walker is a Harvard senior who failed to go out for the varsity team although he has played a lot of polo in Honolulu.

In the preliminary tilt the Crimson freshmen and Jayvees will come together in a Class B contest which should prove a thriller with the 1934 team favored to come through with a victory due to the presence of Lowell Dillingham on the team.

Hansen Advised to Quit Ring Forever

Chicago, Feb. 7 (AP)—Joe Woodman, manager of Knute Hansen, the melancholy Dane heavyweight from Racine, Wis., has advised his pugilist to quit the ring forever.

After the Illinois State Athletic Commission indefinitely suspended Hansen yesterday for his questionable fight against Jose Santa, huge Portuguese, in the Chicago Stadium last Wednesday night, Woodman gave up.

"Hansen was right up among the top contenders for eight years," Woodman said. "Tex Rickard used him often in New York. I think he did his best against Santa, but he can't fight a lick anymore, and he should quit forever."

Huntington Downs B. C. Frosh on Track

Huntington school track team at the Boston Y. M. C. A. outscored the Boston College freshmen, 45 to 23. The relay was a fine triumph for Huntington. The time of 2:16 was the fastest by a Maroon and Black team in eight years.

BOSTON MAN FOR MALONEY-CARNERA GO

By MR. BOSTON

Johnny Martin of Charlestown, will be the young man in the center of the ring when Jim Maloney, South Boston heavyweight, and Primo Carnera start swapping blows in their 10-round bout at Miami, Fla., on March 5.

The Massachusetts Boxing Commission has granted Martin permission to officiate in the Battle of the Palms.

Dan Carroll, manager of Maloney, and Billy Duffy, Carnera's American representative, have agreed that Martin possesses the necessary ability to handle the big heavyweight battle.

Official announcement of the appointment of Martin as referee will come from Miami the latter part of this month.

Jere Gardner, Maloney's trainer, Honeyboy Finnegan and Red Chapman will hop off for the South next Monday.

Two Rings for Arena Amateur Bouts Tonight

There will be two rings when a flock of sturdy amateur boxers breeze into action at an Irish American A. C. show at the Arena tonight. The entry list has been so heavy that Jim Barry felt that this was the only way he could run off his entire show before midnight.

The two ring idea is an innovation for boxing. Followers of amateur boxing show get as much action tonight as one does at a circus.

In the past, it has been necessary for the Irish American Club to limit its entry list so as to get the last of the finals over before midnight. Under the new plan, all of the youngsters can have their innings.

There will be bouts at 126, 133, 147, 160 and 175 pounds and in the heavyweight division.

The heavyweights who will battle tonight include Jimmy McLean, South Boston; Lewis Asack, West Bridgewater; Gilbert Wenset, Weston; Henry Owens, Cambridge; Mike Donovan, Peabody; Larry Johnson, Brighton, and John Crowe of Malden.

The tremendous crowd at the International boxing show at the Garden last Monday night indicates the interest there is in amateur boxing. The fans know the simon purrs give them action.

Zeramby and Britt in New Bedford Bout

Jake Zeramby, flashy Lynn lightweight, will end his training today for his scrap tomorrow night with Young Frankie Britt of Fall River, which will be staged at New Bedford on Monday night. Zeramby recently scored two wins over Johnny Hanlon of Salem and appears as if he is headed for the Title heights.

Britt has not lost a bout in two years and says he will conquer Jake.

If Zeramby wins he will likely be matched to meet Johnny Dundee at Salem.

Loughran Gives Baer a Boxing Lesson

New York, Feb. 7—A left hand that lashed with the force of a saber and stabbed with the speed of a rapier brought the championship dreams of Max Baer to a ridiculous conclusion in a 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden last night.

The decision of Jack Dempsey, the referee, and the two judges was unanimous. Loughran won eight of the 10 rounds. The only rounds that Baer could claim were the second and 10th, and the 10th was merely a concession from Loughran. He was on far ahead of that time that he was content to coast through the final session.

Hornsby Plans to Play First Base for Cubs This Year

NEW POSITION FOR CHICAGO MANAGER

Los Angeles, Feb. 7 (US)—Rogers Hornsby, Chicago Cubs manager and for years one of the leading second sackers of the National League, plans to play first base for the Cubs during the 1931 season.

This much was assured today when the advance guard of the Cub writers arrived here. Harry Neily, sport writer who has been following the Chicago team for years, indicated that a switch was contemplated and declared it was likely that Hornsby would try out at first base and turn over the second basing to "Foote" Blair.

Hornsby has played some first base during his career, though not in recent years. The switch is suited to his weakening legs and injured heel.

While a first baseman must step around fast, there is less necessary running "or the initial sacker than for any of the other infielders.

If no second baseman was available, undoubtedly the Rajah would step into the keystone sack berth but with such a capable man as Blair ready there is no necessity for Hornsby's taking the tough second basing, in addition to his other duties.

Hornsby Fit for Hard Season

Hornsby now is fit for almost any kind of baseball action as a result of a long and careful stretch of training. Last year a trick heel bothered Hornsby and kept him out of action most of the time.

A bone growth, which had to be chiselled down a couple of times, proved too much of a handicap to even the determined Dutch and Hornsby spent a fretful season on the bench.

Dorchester, Brighton, East Boston and Memorial Win

Dorchester, Memorial, East Boston and Brighton High Schools had winning hockey teams on the ice in the Boston High School League competition at the Arena today. Three other contestants ended in scoreless ties.

English and Commerce, Jamaica Plain and Boston College High and Trade School and Latin provided the deadlocks.

Stonehouse of Dorchester was the individual star of the day. The Dorchester center romped through and around the Mechanic Arts players to score three of the four goals his team made to win a 4 to 0 victory.

The contest in which East Boston beat Charlestown the last of the day was great. East B stood won 2 to 0 by counting twice in the last two minutes of play.

Brighton went back into a tie for first place by nosing out a 1 to 0 victory over Hyde Park.

LERMOND AFTER MILE PRIZE

New York, Feb 7—From the Alps of Switzerland, the boulevards of Paris, the snow-swept fields of Canada and the prairies and pavements of the United States the exponents of the art of running further and faster gathered today or one of the most dramatic tests of the indoor track season.

Tonight at Madison Square Garden the Millrose A. A. will stage its annual games. The hand-picked list of stars includes such names as Dr. Paul Martin, the swift Swiss, Seraphim Martin, world's record holder at 800 metres, Leigh Miller to say nothing of Joe Conger, America's best miler; Russell Chapman, Bates College half-miler de luxe, and Leo Lermond, Boston's best bet in the distance runs.

Tonight's spotlight will shine the brightest and longest the longest on one event—the Wanamaker mile. Some think the indoor record of 4 12 held jointly by Joie Ray and Percy Norman, the greatest of them all, may be in peril.

Victory means for Conger permanent possession of the prized Wanamaker trophy. Lermond says that as long as he is in the race the winning time must be 4 13 or better. And George Eneke, the Swedish champion, will be there to keep the pace from lagging.

Dr. Martin was to have started in this murderous mile, too, but a bad cold will keep him out, he says. Instead, he may have a fling at the 2000-yard event.

Levinsky in K. O. Win Over Jack Gagnon

By JACK CONWAY

King Levinsky has all the sparkle and color that made King Solomon such a big Boston favorite. In addition he has a tremendous punch packed away in his right duke.

Jack Gagnon will bear testimony to the fact the King can hit, as he was knocked out in the third round of his [illegible] with Levinsky at the Boston Garden Arena. A terrific right hand wallop on the jaw sent Gagnon to the canvas. He was still trying to get to his feet at the count of ten.

Jack Conway

Levinsky gets every ounce of his weight behind his right hand punch. He hits with as much power as did the handsome Jack Delaney when the Rajput of the North was cutting down all opposition.

There isn't anything fancy about Levinsky's style as a boxer or slugger. He merely delivers a blow. He bobs and weaves around the ring, and hurls punches from almost anywhere. He picks right hand rocks from off the floor and lets them go.

It was 300 to 1 that Levinsky would win by a knockout before the bout had gone very far. The King found the range to Gagnon's jaw, and he has plenty of power behind his right hand thrusts.

King Opens Fire Early in the First Round

The first round was not very old when the King plastered Gagnon on the jaw with a right hand belt. Jack took the punch well and tried to land with a right of his own. Levinsky got inside of Gagnon's punch. Before the round ended King had scored with four right hand swats to the jaw and several light lefts to the body.

In the second frame, Levinsky almost blew Gagnon apart with a right to the jaw. Jack's knees buckled and it appeared as though he must go down. Instead he moved forward and let both hands go. Levinsky sent [illegible] punches and [illegible] into a clinch.

Soon after the opening gong of the third round Levinsky landed [illegible] his corner and met Gagnon the other side of the center of the ring. The King pulled back his right duke and let it breeze with all of the power of his body behind it. The blow crashed to Gagnon's jaw and the latter went to the canvas in a heap.

Gagnon landed on his face and it was apparent he would be unable to continue. At the count of eight Gagnon made an effort to get up but his feet would not respond to the order from the brain. At the count of ten Gagnon was still trying to get up. He stood erect just after Referee Jack O'Connor had counted him out. Jack was still unsteady on his feet and the King assisted him to his corner.

Five thousand persons paid $7000 to see the show. When the boys returns to Boston again he will draw $20,000 if pitted against a suitable opponent.

There were not many women at the show despite the fact the Garden admitted them free provided they had an escort. The fair sex does not care for indoor boxing. They prefer the outdoor ring spectacles.

Lou Brouillard Clicks With Another Kayo

Lou Brouillard of Worcester added another kayo victim to his list when he stopped Alf Ross of New York in six rounds. Ross was badly cut up around the face. The claret started to spout from Ross' nose. Brouillard held back punches and called Ross' condition to the attention of Referee O'Connor, who halted the bout.

Jack McCarthy of Roxbury scored a decision victory over Pat O'Flaherty of South Boston in an eight-round event.

Leslie Baker of Watertown out pointed Joe Venuti of the South End in six rounds. Joe O'Donnell of Roxbury was awarded the decision over Al Alrich of Sanford in four heats, while Parice Apice of Providence disposed of Fiana Mooring of the North End in four frames.

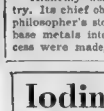
Iodine of Value to Health

—By DR. COPELAND—

IT IS quite common to meet a woman who has a large swelling in the neck. This is due to a condition spoken of as 'Goitre.'



In front of the neck just beneath the skin, is a gland called the 'Thyroid Gland.' When this gland is normal in size it is not noticeable nor can it be felt. When enlarged it may assume huge proportions becoming very conspicuous particularly upon swallowing.

The thyroid gland absorbs the iodine contained in the blood. Iodine is converted by the thyroid gland into other substances, particularly a substance called "Thyroidin." This is an important process, essential for the normal operation of the body.

Disturbances of this gland result in various diseases. If the gland is over-active there may result an ailment known as "Exophthalmic Goitre." If it is under active we may have undernourishment and even undermining of the constitution.

The most common disturbance of this gland is known as "Simple Goitre." This condition is due to a deficiency of iodine in the water or food. The gland increases in size and if not checked in its growth, there may result serious nervous disorders.

This condition is particularly common in the so-called "goitre districts." In these regions the iodine contents of the water is low. As soon as the deficiency is corrected, which is usually done by the feeding of iodine in some form, the enlargement of the gland rapidly disappears. In the goitre districts schoolchildren are fed iodine tablets. In some cities iodine is actually added to the municipal water supply.

It is known that certain foods, notably salmon, carry iodine. The vegetables raised in South Carolina are found to be high in iodine content. You should talk with your doctor about the feeding of your children, particularly if they show any signs of goitre.

Besides those I have mentioned, there are other forms of thyroid disturbances. All of them require careful medical care and in many times, in advanced cases, are only cured by operations.

Great progress in the study of thyroid diseases have been made during the past decade. This is particularly true in the field of thyroid surgery. Much suffering and physical disability have been eliminated by means of this progress.

Answers to Health Queries

Mrs. R. S. D. Q.—I have been told by a throat doctor that I have no thyroid glands, and never have had. Can that be possible?

A.—Perhaps your doctor meant that you have no enlargement of the thyroid glands.

J. C. B. Q.—Would the habitual use of very hot water for drinking purposes result in the destruction of the mucous membrane of the throat and stomach?

A.—No.

Cora M. Q.—Would Epsom salts baths be reducing? Would this injure the skin in any way?

A.—Epsom salts baths might prove weakening if taken too frequently. No. If you wish to reduce sit down on sweets and starches and keep the system clear.

THE WHISPERER

Drawn by NELL BRINKLEY

"Who can view the ripen'd rose, nor seek to wear it?"

THERE ARE so many things fashioned in this world to help the Whisperer along—so many things that speak for him—so many allies, colored to prove his words. When a man and a girl wander farther and farther in the enclosed garden, lured by a will o'the-wisp that leads on, they come to the wall where the home garden ends and the unknown trails that Love travels begin.

And there they hear the Whisperer. And around him the whole world rustles and sparkles and gurgles "yes" to everything he says. The leaves of the trees flurry-hue in the night, one more beautiful thing in the world—assent. The stars, sparks of white, blue and red fire, jump up and down, wink and whisk out of sight against a sky-curtain of imperial blue, saying, "Yes—yes!" The fountain babbles in silver, adding to the lovely world that Love is painting for the man and the girl falling strings of diamonds that patter "yes." The whole world of nature backs up the tale of the Whisperer, who, mounted on the back of a winged unicorn, his right-hand Cupid, stands below the wall a Sage, a Cynic, an Innocent, a Tempter, but a thing of beauty like the rest of the world around.

He whispers, "Come out into Love's real world. So far you are living in a dream. Join my subjects. There are no bachelors or maiden-ladies in it. Kings and queens are types and scholars, soldiers, sailors, bankers, bakers, rich-man, poor-man, artists, all are out of the garden, where you exchange only a smile, a sigh, a kiss and a hand-clasp. Poor Fare. My subjects have a little house—and maybe a baby or two, and a bit in the bank, I hope! Listen—you may find distress sometimes, for you must take things as they fall, and sometimes they fall askew in this world; and you may find a desert to cross, but OHH the glory of having each other, the charm of life when two who love each other live it together!

"Come over the wall, my children—and get MARRIED!"

And so young people keep on climbing out of the family garden, where all is safe, to follow the Whisperer over roads that are alternately rosy and rocky.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

TIGER HEART

By Robert Terry Shannon

THERE was no escape for connie; she had to face Duke Garson, and face him now that he had grasped the meaning of her involuntary outcry of being left alone with him—in his eyes she had seen it, his realization that she was so strongly, so dangerously, affected by his close presence.

A sense of unreality engulfed her; the impact of this new sensation made everything—all life—feel like a dream. In rapid, disorganized review the recent topsy-turvy events spread through her mind. The series was startling; the discovery that she had a half-sister, the reclaiming of Kitty from the depths of Tenth ave. and her installation here, the broken engagement with Jim and, amazingly, the quick flowering affair between Kitty and Jim. And now, overshadowing all, her own upsetting emotion for Duke Garson. The smooth inertia and her past appeared done with forever—events, one after the other, concentrated in time beat upon her with vigorous rapidity, until at last, now, their culmination left her shaking, trembling like a tree in the wind.

Garson looked at her steadily, his dark eyes speculative as he spoke.

"Come here," he said, softly. He retreated to the furthermost darkened corner of the veranda where there was a long, upholstered wicker seat. Connie struggled eternally to refuse, but her will weakened and she followed him.

"Sit down."

She obeyed and he dropped down beside her.

"Let's get this all straight, now you're not yourself. Tell me what's the trouble."

"I don't know," she said, and her voice, even to her own ears, sounded strange.

"I know a great deal more about men than I do about women," he said. "What might be going on in your mind is pretty much of a mystery to me—but I'm wondering if you are foolish enough to give room to any lingering, silly feelings as to account of Kitty and Tracy?"

"No, you know that's not true," she told him.

"And you're not worried or excited over what I told you about that weak-kneed butler, Higgins?"

"I forgot all about him—"

"Then what is it that has changed you?"

She felt, she knew, that Duke Garson was aware of the malady of her senses that drew her emotion toward him. Previously, she had seen his eyes light with recognition—she thought she had—and now he affected pumped ignorance. Surely, she imagined, a man must know it when a girl begins to care for him. Could such things, ever, be concealed? There were byways of human affections, quirks and turns and twists that eluded her understanding—perhaps, after all, Garson had not fathomed her feelings. But to sit beside him here in the dusky light of a summer night made her tremulous all over; she was, positively, as silly as Kitty; yet she had not the openness of desire that could easily give frank expression to what she felt. Her whole instinct, perversely, was to conceal, to fight against and refuse to acknowledge the magnetic attraction that vibrated through her so dangerously.

"I suppose I'm just nervous," she defended herself. "But let's not talk about me; tell me what you think about Kitty and Jim. Don't you think—"

"We should either of us bother to think about them?" he asked. "They'll find their way right enough. After all, they are fairly simple. You and I—we are different—we are complex creatures. Haven't you felt that we are similar—that we belong, somehow mysteriously, to a world into which neither of them could ever enter?"

"I felt something—I don't know what it was," Connie admitted.

"When I was telling you today about the things I've done and the crude and vicious men I've associated with—it wasn't easy for me. The life I have lived is something like a difficult problem in higher mathematics—only a person with a certain kind of mind could ever correct the solution of it all. I was afraid that you might get me all wrong, but I simply had to tell you. It's not my habit to talk so much about myself. Tell me, now that you know what I have been and am, has it set me back any with you? Has it put me outside the pale?"

Connie's voice was almost a whisper. "No."

"I bear all the appearances of evil, but I want you to understand—"

She looked up at him her eyes luminous with fear.

"What do I care about the kind of life you led?" she demanded. "We're here together now—all it's coincidence, a miracle, if you like. I just know that all I can see and feel about you is right here before me. You are YOU! And I—I—"

Her voice broke and she was unable to finish.

THERE was an uncertain moment in which Connie felt herself on the brink of casting aside all reserve and telling Duke Garson, in one confessing rush, how he had unstring her. Almost but not quite, she was ready to melt into his arms . . .

Vastly experienced in life, Garson was still a novice at love. Another man within th was of women might have kept silent and allowed the moment of wordless surrender to come upon him; yet Duke Garson felt constrained to speak, and his words formed little barricades behind which Connie took shelter.

"I don't care what people think about me—I never have," he said, with the barest trace of hesitation in his voice. "I live my life as I see fit, but today, when I was talking to you, I was afraid you would misunderstand me. If I tried, I couldn't tell you why I wanted to appear well in your eyes—but out there in the garden it seemed the most important necessity I ever faced.

"Disappointed" Seeks Advice

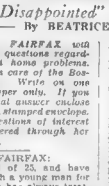
By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

BEATRICE FAIRFAX will gladly answer questions regarding heart and home problems. Address her in care of the Boston American. Write on one side of the paper only. If you wish a personal answer enclose self-addressed, stamped envelope. Otherwise, questions of interest will be answered through her daily columns.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of 25, and have been going with a young man for five years. He has always treated me with respect and has given me the idea that some day we would be married. Recently he has been acting rather peculiar and he admits he has become acquainted with another girl who seems to fascinated him. I understand he sees this girl quite often and he has stopped coming to see me altogether. What would you advise in a case like this?

DISAPPOINTED.



Beatrice Fairfax

Dear Disappointed—There is little you can do when you find that a man's attention is wandering. You say that he gave you the idea that you might be married, but this is not very clear. Do you mean that he actually proposed to you, or was it just an unspoken understanding? If you are very good friends of long standing, I would exercise considerable patience if you really think his love is worth having. Now is a good time to think of actions and characteristics, and judge them as dispassionately as possible. After all, there are plenty of nice men, and the loss of this one need not ruin your life. At any rate, you have not lost by patient waiting and you may be surprised to find him back again in a few months.

Let Him Go

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am in love with a boy from the country. He tells me he loves me, but still he pays great attention to other girls I have written to him several times but he doesn't answer my letters. He claims to be too busy. This is always his excuse. I'm getting tired of it and I think I'll give him up. He pays great attention to me when I see him, which is not very often. He is the only one of all my beaus, and I have many, that I really am interested in.

TOOTS

Dear Toots—When a man really is interested in a girl he is never too busy to write to her or call her up, or in some way let her know of his constant affections. It may take a little effort to became interested in someone else, but I really think it is the wisest thing to do.

Nutrition in Dishes That Aid Budget

By MARTHA LEE

Organizer and Conductor of New England's Largest Homemakers' Club of Over 37,000

PENNY WISE we must be these days if we are to beat old H C of L at her own game. The question is WHERE can economies be most wisely practiced in careful buying of clothing, certainly in household equipment and if VERY much on our tables.

The human machine can run well on inferior fuel, but neither does it require the choicest meat cuts to keep it humming smoothly.

Let prepared today's menus with Mr. Budget's teachings hand in hand with fine flavor and nutrition.

SCALLOPED HAM AND MACARONI

16 sticks macaroni.
1 cup minced ham
2 level tbsps. butter.
1 level tbsp. flour.
½ tsp. pepper.
3 level tbsps. grated cheese.
½ cup stale breadcrumbs.
1 level tbsp. butter.
1 cup milk.

Break the macaroni into short lengths and cook it in boiling salted water till tender, which will probably take about 30 minutes. Make a sauce by blending the butter and flour smoothly, adding the milk and stirring till the mixture boils; then add the pepper but no salt, as the ham will sufficiently salt the mixture.

Grease a baking dish and place in it alternate layers of macaroni, ham and sauce, sprinkling a little of the cheese over each layer of the macaroni.

Melt the other tbsp. of butter, add the crumbs to it and stir till they have absorbed the butter. Spread over the ingredients in the dish and bake till golden brown.

CHEESE TOAST

2 level tbsps. butter
3 level tbsps. flour
Salt and cayenne
1 cup milk
1 cup grated cheese
Slices of buttered toast

Make the toast first and keep in hot oven preparing the sauce.

Melt the butter, add the flour and blend smoothly; season and put in the milk a little at a time, stirring constantly. After cooking 5 minutes put in the cheese and when melted pour over the toast and place in a hot oven for 8 minutes before serving. A cup of thick stewed tomatoes can be added for a change.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

P. S.—Don't forget to sharpen up your pencils and send in all your recipes using Mueller's macaroni and spaghetti for the second big contest. There is $100 in cash prizes for the lucky winners. Send all recipes to the Macaroni Contest Editor, care of Martha Lee, Boston Evening American, Boston. And be sure to attach a Mueller's macaroni wrapper to your recipe.

JELLY ROLL THAT ROLLS

3 eggs.
3 tbsps. flour
3 tbsps. sugar
½ tsp. baking powder
1 glass jelly

Beat the yolks until very light. Add the sugar and beat again till well mixed. Sift flour and baking powder and add to egg mixture. Fold in beaten whites. Bake in pan 9 inches square by 11 inches. Bake at 350 deg. F. about 8 minutes. Remove from oven and turn cake onto a paper. Spread with jelly and roll up. Sprinkle outside with powdered sugar.

This recipe defies all the other rules for jelly rolls. Try it once and you will never use any other recipe. Do not add any more flour or milk even if you think the amount given is too small. Mrs Ina Potter 21 Carmel st., Chelsea.

Cheap Money Rates for N. Y. Brokers Only

Wall St. Awaiting News of Extra Session; Watson's Views

—By B. C. Forbes—

New York, Feb. 7—Thomas J. Watson, president of the International Business Machines Corporation, which enjoyed record-breaking business last year, made this observation to 500 of his sales force:

B. C. Forbes

"It would have been impossible for us to have made the record we made last year had it not been for the fact that a great many other businesses were very prosperous. We sometimes overlook these things. We hear so much about unemployment, and the million men being unemployed, that we lose sight of the fact that there are more than forty-three million people gainfully employed and furnishing buying power to keep the wheels turning."

A lot of people are puzzled when they see money quoted in Wall Street at 1½ or 2 per cent, and then find, when they go to a bank to borrow, that they must pay three or four times these rates.

A Chicago reader, having written complaining bitterly—and sarcastically—over an experience of this kind, I sent his letter to the largest bank there, the Continental Illinois Bank, and the reply explains things briefly but lucidly:

"These published money rates in Wall Street apply to New York brokers' loans for large amounts collateralled by prime, readily marketable securities. Individual borrowers 'over the counter,' even in New York, pay higher rates than brokers' loans contain, especially as the latter are strictly payable at maturity or on demand, and the lender is under no obligation to extend a renewal.

"Further, the quotations should not be considered applicable to money markets outside of New York. Our local brokers and the Chicago market are paying 4 to 4½ per cent for local accommodation, while rates for individual borrowers range from 4½ to 6 per cent, depending on the size of the loan, the value of the borrower's account and the marketability of the collateral.

"We think you will agree that, considering the bank's operating expenses, it would scarcely be profitable to lend any considerable amount of funds at 1½ per cent or less; in fact, you will find that, as a rule, funds loaned at these rates represent temporary excess deposits in the hands of the lending bankers."

Financial hopes are rising that an extra session of Congress will be avoided. If it is, other things stand a good chance of rising.

Ernest Suffern, head of the General Industrial Foundation, New York, is convinced that everybody in the big city is not dishonest—although, true, New York has been giving people throughout the country too much reason for thinking otherwise, what with its exposed dishonesty among magistrates, politicians, police and, now, bank executives and directors.

Mr. Suffern was stunned to discover the other evening that he had left a bag containing valuable and irreplacable papers in a taxi. He had taken no notice of the number of the chauffeur's cab, or even of the name of the company owning the taxi.

Before he had time to set in motion any machinery to locate pilferage, he was apprised by the National Transportation Co, that one of its drivers, Irving Rosenstein had turned in the precious bag.

George L. Cochrane told stockholders of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co. of California at the annual meeting this week that the company did more business and made more money last year than ever before. He added:

"We are looking forward to making still greater progress this year."

The dividend was increased—and Mr. Cochrane hints that other increases should follow the increase in the company's waxing prosperity.

President Harry E. Ward of the Irving Trust Co., one of New York's managing financial institutions, commenting on Dr. Daniel Starch's competition showing a 10 per cent increase in stockholders of large American enterprises, which was summarized in this column a few days ago, says in a personal note:

"What strikes me as the most important point in the article is the expression that it is an age of great business enterprises owned by the people. That's good. We have altogether too much nowadays about 'great business enterprises' that are 'owned by the people' feature has not been given anything like its proper place in the picture. I am afraid that the dear old octopus idea is still strong in the public mind, and it is most unfortunate.

"The stockholder figures presented show a tendency toward people ownership which, if it keeps up, might well seize the octopus problem in a comparatively few years."

ELY TO SPEAK BEFORE N. E. TRAFFIC MEN

By FRANK H. MELOON

Twentieth annual banquet of the Traffic Club of New England at the Copley-Plaza February 17 will be featured with addresses by Governor Ely and President Victor M. Cutler of the United Fruit Co. A. H. Erlandson is chairman of the entertainment committee. The president of the Traffic Club is E. C. Webster and the secretary-treasurer is P. L. Stuart. Announcement of the choice of speakers was made public today.

Edward L. Greene, general manager of the National Better Business Bureau, Inc, founder of the Boston bureau, sends the writer some interesting information. Mr. Greene declares that publicity recently given to "gullible" searches for "next" heirs of English and Irish estates seems likely to revive an old and persistent swindle.

Edward L. Greene

Mr. Greene declares that although many persons have made contributions to organizations or agents in the hope of sharing in vast unclaimed estates, a great many of the alleged estates are mythical. He says:

"It is a popular error that the funds of unclaimed estates are left on deposit in the Bank of England. This institution keeps a record of unclaimed Government securities and dividends, and no other kind of unclaimed property."

J. A. Knowlton advocate of tide power, offers us an ambitious scheme. He declares a tide power plant capable of generating 1,000,000 horsepower could easily be placed at the mouth of the Merrimack river. It would include Plum Island to be utilized as the main dam, with the Merrimack as the high reservoir, and the Plum Island river, the Parker and Ipswich rivers as the low reservoir or spillway. Mr. Knowlton's plan would call for dams at the end of Plum Island. He estimates the cost of carrying it into execution as $6,048,131.

Next week brings another "Friday the 13th." According to Thomas W. Lawson superstition, it is a lucky day and not one of "bad luck" as popularly believed. By the way, the greatest market crash of all history didn't take place on the 13th of the month, or even near it. So much for superstition. "Count" Lawson, by the way, had faith in astrology, at least he consulted an astrologist for aid in his stock market operations.

Wellesley voted opposition to the proposed Worcester-to-Boston "turnpike." The name turnpike exists although no turnpike is proposed. Quoting a standard dictionary:

"TURNPIKE—A road on which turnpikes, or toll-gates, were established by law, and which are or were formerly made and kept in repair by the tolls collected from carriages, carts, wagons, cattle, etc., which traveled on them."

There are not lacking those who think modern highways should be built as turnpikes, instead of by bond issues. Massachusetts proudly boasts of a "pay-as-you-go" policy. Travelling along an improved turnpike, we would indeed pay as we go.

* * *

The modern highway, if toll roads were established, would collect little from travel of autos, despite the big market at Brighton, for example. Ask any well informed cattleman will tell you that th. modern road, hard-surfaced, makes the feet of cattle sore when they have trod t only a few miles. Before the automobile brought us the hard-surfaced roads, cattle were driven by the hundreds to Brighton from Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. The dirt roads did not injure their feet.

* * *

The Boston & Maine Railroad is probably the chief beneficiary of the changed conditions. North country cattlemen have secured the rates of transportation by the carload into Brighton are enjoy reasonable.

LEADERS GAIN IN NEW YORK DEALINGS

Approximate sales today, 1,200,000 shares
Week ago, 600,000
Year ago, 3,391,270

New York, Feb. 7.—A brisk upturn was recorded by leaders in the short session of the New York Stock Exchange today.

Bull groups resumed operations in the motor shares, office appliances, chemicals and a number of specialties, prompting scattered retreat of the bears in the last half hour.

There were numerous gains of 2 to 5 points, and transactions for the three-hour session aggregated 1,200,000 shares.

GEN. MOTORS AT HIGH.

While week-end business surveys were none too cheerful, the stock exchange monthly report of the ratio of brokers' loans to the total market value of listed shares showed that on February 1 loans for carrying stock on margin amounted to only about 3.1-3 per cent of the total market value of stocks.

Never, since comparable statistics have been available in the stock trading been reduced to such a thorough-going cash basis. A year previously loans amounted to about 5% per cent of the market value of all shares.

General Motors sold up more than a point to the best price of the new year, and other automobile issues up a point or two included Nash, Hudson, Hupp, Pierce Arrow, Mack Truck, Fullman and Electric Autolite. Auburn shot up 6.

Steels were sluggish until the late trading, but U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and Byers closed up a point or so, and other important industrials up 1 to 2 included American Can, Case, Eastman, Johns Manville and Westinghouse Electric.

The chemicals appeared to have been oversold on the basis of declines in chemical prices. Allied shot up 5 and U. S. Industrial Alcohol gained 4. Union Carbide gained two.

ATCHISON ADVANCES

Rails and utilities did not join conspicuously in the advance but Atchison sold up nearly 4, and such issues as New York Central, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, N. J. North American and American Water Works gained a point or two.

In the office appliances, Burroughs, National Cash Register, Underwood Elliott and International Business Machines sold up 1 to nearly 5 points. Chain store firms, American and Liggett and Myers Tobacco gained a point. Oils and coppers were sluggish, but steady.

Weekend reports of steel mill activity indicated small gains in the Chicago and Youngstown districts for next week. Rumors of a sag in steel prices were scouted in trade circles, where it was said that an advance would be more likely. U. S. Steel's monthly unfilled tonnage report, to be made public next Tuesday, is expected to be moderately favorable, although 30 U. S. Steel statistics are vague.

The fact that the weekly mercantile reviews reported some disappointing results in retail and wholesale trade failed to influence market. Chain store results for January have been fairly satisfactory, and the early date of Easter this year will have a stimulating effect before long.

Declaration of the regular preferred dividends by Radio Corp. of America was a favorable development, discrediting the pessimists who had felt concern on that score.

ELECTRIC BOND AT NEW HIGH

New York, Feb. 7.—Electric Bond & Share reached a new current high on the New York Curb today, up over 2 points. Raybestos also posted its steady rise, up about 6 points in two days.

Aggressive bullish operations in a select number of market favorites stimulated the entire Curb list today, and generally higher prices were in evidence at the close.

Unlisted issues on show a firm tone included American Superpower, American & Foreign Power warrants, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, Northern States Power, United Gas and United Light & Power.

Cities Service backed and filled narrowly, holding approximately unchanged throughout the day.

Vacuum spurted sharply to a new high for the year, scoring a gain of almost 3 points. Humble and Standard of Indiana also responded moderately to improved buying demand.

Outstanding features of strength in the specialty list were Utah Radio, which jumped 3½ points; Technicolor, up 2¾, and Ford, Ltd., up 1¼ at 19¾.

Bonds Are Tinged With Irregularity

New York, Feb. 7.—Progress in the bond market was held within narrow limits today as price movement was tinged with irregularity. The reaction was mild however, and set up a technical basis for upward trend which has been maintained most of the week.

Cotton Lower in New York Market

New York, Feb. 7.—Early gains were erased and cotton futures today finished barely steady 3 to 6 points lower; March, 10.61-63; May, 10.88-89; July, 11.12; October, 11.37-39; December, 11.55-57; January, 11.62-63. Spot, steady; middling, 10.70.

Silver Is Sold at Fresh Record Low

New York, Feb. 7.—Bar silver recorded a fresh record low today, selling at 26¼ cents, off ⅝ from yesterday's figure.

BIG GREEN TEAM SURE OF WINTER SPORT TITLE

Hanover, N. H., Feb. 7 (AP)—The Big Green entered the closing events of the Dartmouth winter carnival today with the intercollegiate sports union championship clinched firmly in her grasp. The first five events, run off yesterday, netted the Indians 34 points.

Dartmouth had Jack Shea and Don Mahoney to thank for her success. Shea captured both the quarter-mile and two-mile skating races and Mahoney, fleet-skating freshman, took second.

New Hampshire, defending champion, was in second place with nine points; McGill, third, with six; Harvard, fourth, with five; Williams, fifth, with one.

The Dartmouth score mounted steadily as second and third places went to her in the proficiency skiing competition and first, second and fourth places in the downhill speed race were awarded Indian skiiers.

Ski jumping held the attention of everyone today as the carnival neared a close.

FEW NEW NAMES FOR TUNNEL FOUND

Tunnel namers, through some strange twist of mental telepathy, nearly all sent in different names from any o. those submitted before, only a few of the namers sticking along with the leading contenders.

And, as a result, the 20 leaders picked up only a few votes each in the daily mass of mail.

Many of the new names, however, contained the name Curley in some form or other.

Here are the first 20 leaders and their totals thus far tabulated:

Curley Tunnel	127
James M. Curley, Jr., Tunnel	70
Boston connections	65
James M. Curley Tunnel	53
Airport designations	47
Lincoln designations	45
Meridian designations	33
Tercentenary designations	33
Harbor designations	31
Hub designtaions	28
Paul Revere designations	27
Noddle designations	27
North-East designations	24
Ely designations	23
North Shore designations	19
Curley Tube	19
Gen. Edwards designations	18
Lindbergh designations	15
Liberty designations	15
Atlantic designations	13

If you haven't sent in your idea for a name there is still time. Merely fill in the coupon and mail it to TUNNEL EDITOR, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

No letter is necessary, and please do not paste the coupon to cards or to letters. It merely makes its handling harder in the mass of votes.

LINCOLN DAY IN CHURCHES OF BOSTON

MORGAN MEMORIAL

The Rev. E. C. McLeod will express himself on Abraham Lincoln and the progress of the colored people tomorrow. In speaking of his people, he says: "The Negro has not 'arrived,' but he is traveling fast notwithstanding racial discrimination in church and state. If the great emancipator Lincoln were alive today with his great heart of love for the common man, could anyone doubt as to what his position would be concerning the Negro's demands for rigid fairness in business, a full wage for full work where white and colored people labor together at the same task?"

PASTOR OF ST. CYPRIANS WILL STAY IN ROXBURY

The Rev. Leroy Ferguson of St. Cyprian's Church, Roxbury, has been given a call to return to his parish in Louisville, Ky., where he once preached for a dozen years or more. He has about decided not to accept this offer, which he considers flattering. He will preach tomorrow morning on "The Christian at Lent," a sermon in which he will refer to spiritual qualities possessed by Abraham Lincoln. In the evening the young people of the church will hold their Lincoln service. At the evening service there will be a coronation of the Queen of the Fleur-de-Lis. Young people will talk on the "Life, character and achievements of Lincoln."

Founders' Day at A. M. E. Zion Church

The 150th anniversary of the denomination and the birthday of the founder of the Church, St. Church, Richard Allen, gave double inspiration to "Founders' Day," which will be held tomorrow with services both morning and evening. The Rev. Oliver W. Childers is to preach on "The Aims of the A. M. E. Church and Its Achievements." Music will be furnished by the senior choir. A 3 o'clock meeting in the afternoon will discuss such questions as "Following in the Trail of the Fathers," "The A. M. E. Church and Missions," "Richard Allen, Our Founder," "Wilberforce University and Her Future," "The A. M. E. Church in New England," coln."

COMMON CAUSE FORUM

Galileo is the subject and Mr. John F. Monahan of Dorchester the speaker announced for the Common Cause Forum Sunday night in Franklin Union Hall, corner Berkeley and Appleton sts.

Mr. Monahan, who is an attorney, newspaper correspondent and lecturer on civic and historical subjects, will tell the story of this early 17th century discoverer of the theory governing the pendulum.

CHURCHES

Has Faith

The Rev. S. Leroy Lavicount, pastor of the Union Colored Church, Roxbury, sees a continual march of his people, and he maintains that the white heart of America is not fundamentally cruel and indifferent to dark-skinned citizens.

standing Ourselves and Others," is a British-born South African Dutchman, who has been prominent in this country a year ago by way of London, and who has several times appeared in Boston. For a number of years Dr. Obermeyer was professor of Dutch at the University of South Africa, where he returned to England and took the degree of doctor of philosophy at London University, after which he began at once to devote himself to writing and lecturing

HOW CAN WE GET RID OF RACKETEERS?

The Rev. Laurence Breed Walker of the Buena Vista, St. Universalist Church, Roxbury, will attempt to answer the question of "How Can We Rid Our Country of Racketeers?" "Shall We Allow the Underworld to Rule the Destinies of Our Cities?" "Will Not an Aroused Public Opinion Lead to Action?" Here are some of the questions to be discussed tomorrow afternoon at 4:45. Other questions with which this young man will treat are "Shall We Lower the Standard of Living?" Dr. Walker speaks of his meeting as "a short, up-to-date program that is altogether different."

DUDLEY ST. CHURCH IN AN INDIAN SERVICE

A great "Indian Music" night at the Dudley St. Baptist Church, Roxbury, will be held at 7:15 o'clock tomorrow evening, to which several orders of Red Men and Daughters of Pocahontas have been invited to attend. The musical program is to be in charge of a choir of the following: Ferdinand memorial organ, "Indian Love Call," by Primi; Dudley Indian music choir, "In the Land of the Sky Blue Water," by Cadman; adult chorus of 60, "Song to Wenshipetre," a Zuni song, which will be sung in the native Zuni language; Miss Florence C. Young, soprano, will render "Pale Moon," by Logan, and Mrs. Edith Steyo Wilson, contralto, will sing "By the Waters of Minnetonka," by Lieurner. Rev. Isaac Higginbotham of the Baptist state convention will speak upon "The Whole Wide World for Christ."

ST. PAUL A. M. E. CHURCH

NEW PARISH HALL

A new and beautiful parish room will be open for the first time tomorrow afternoon, when the Intercollegiate Club of young people connected with the Arlington Street Unitarian Church gathers there for discussion and social intercourse. There will be supper at 6:30, followed by a talk from Miss Elizabeth Moseley of the Foxboro Hospital. This room has been designed in the atmosphere of a comfortable parlor with fireplace and easy furniture.

In the morning Dr. Samuel A. Eliot will preach on "Some Landmarks of Liberalism."

UNITY CHURCH

"Loving Faith in Religious Teachings," is a topic to be preached about by the Rev. F. A. Wiggin, D. D., who will emphasize the need of faith in the present economic world.

CHURCH OF THE ADVENT

A students' club which gathers every other Sunday in the rectory of the Church of the Advent now draws from Harvard, Technology, Boston University, Emerson College and many other similar institutions. Forty and fifty young men and young women have in this way an opportunity to become acquainted with the rector and with each other. Tomorrow evening this club will again come together. Sandwiches are served and other light refreshments. All students invited. Extend are invited. This takes place immediately after the evening service in the church.

PARK ST. CHURCH

Dr. A. Z. Conrad will answer several questions of interest tomorrow evening preceding his sermon on "The Master's Mightiest Miracle," "Do you think that Jesus ever made a mistake?" "Should the great truth be called an act of God?" "Is it possible for the trustees of Andover Seminary to carry out the purposes of the founders?" "Would Massachusetts suffer if the Legislature did not pass a singe bill this year?" "Is Bible chronology reliable?"

WEST NEWTON BAPTIST

The Rev. G. W. Washington of the Myrtle Baptist Church has chosen to preach tomorrow morning on "Forgiving a Condition of Receiving Forgiveness." At the noon hour a subject for study is "Jesus the World Teacher." At the 3 o'clock installation service a sermon will be delivered by the Rev. John Shade Franklin of the Lincoln Park Church, and his choir will furnish the music. "Closer Prayer" is a topic for the pastor at the evening service. Christian Endeavor comes at 6:30.

NYE EXPENSES RUNNING HIGH

Washington, Feb. 7—Senator Gerald P. Nye's Senatorial Campaign Investigating Committee, which spent $96,503.12 in 14 states, a statement in Illinois for Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick inquiry than it did on all the others combined, a recapitulation of its expense account showed today.

Of $55,728.48 spent by the Nye committee its specific investigation work in various states, $29, 350.16 was used in the Illinois investigation, the report revealed. Of this sum, a salary of $500 a month and expenses, for seven months, went to a night watchman named H. J. Loose, employe of a Chicago newspaper.

The expense account, regrouped today to show expenditures by states, disclosed that in 6 states of states the committee spent more in its investigation than the candidates under investigation spent in his election campaign. And in several states, the account shows, the Nye committee spent more than both candidates combined.

MORATORIUM IN BRITAIN URGED

London, Feb. 7 (AP)—The cry of a moratorium for reparations and war debts has been taken up by a group of Liberals, three of whom are members of Parliament, Viscount Elmley, Edgar Granville and Frank Owen, in a statement the signatories say:

"Nothing but an emergency plan guided by a scientific government and backed by national push can save the standard of life of our people. Payment of reparations and the American debt causes a distortion of international trade and credit and we must declare a moratorium over a period of our internal development schemes for all debts of this kind whether payable to us or by us.

"When payments are resumed they must take the form of merchandise."

Beacon Oil Wins Blast Damage Suits

Jury of Middlesex County yesterday returned a verdict in the defendant in the case of Eva Anderson vs. Beacon Oil Company. This case was tried at a level and by stipulation filed in court, 29 other case are bound by the result of the Anderson case. All of these cases grew out of an explosion occurring at the plant of the defendant company on February 10, 1928, and the damages were claimed by various persons living in the vicinity.

The question "was the explosion at the plant of the Beacon Oil Company at Everett on this afternoon of February 10, 1928, caused by negligence for which the defendant is legally responsible?" submitted to the jury was answered "no" by it.

7 RESCUED IN ORANGE FIRE

Orange, Feb. 7—Seven persons, guests at the Orange Hotel, a town landmark, were rescued from death early today when fire, starting in the attic, swept through the three-story wooden building.

The fire was discovered by a motorist, who sounded an alarm and then ran through the building and aroused the occupants.

The fire had gained such headway, however, that escape by the stairways was cut off, and only the quick arrival of firemen, who raised ladders to the windows on the upper floors, prevented possible loss of life.

The cause of the fire was unknown. Damage was estimated at $6500.

Russian Liner With 100 Aboard Hits Rock

Science Plans to Treat Insanity Cases by Use of Gases

New York, Feb. 7—Treatment or tangible relief of insanity might be possible by the administration of a mixture of carbon dioxide and oxygen gases.

Patients of dementia praecox, insanity of grown-up persons, have been revived from a state of stupor by the inhalation of this gas mixture.

officially adopted by the police department of New York although other cities, including Los Angeles, have officially adopted them."

"The truth drug?" The doctor's voice was incredulous, full of scorn of the orthodox man of medicine. "A drug to make a man tell the truth—against his nature, as the lawyers say. It must be a most remarkable concoction. Did you invent it?"

"Scopalamin," replied Thatcher Colt, "was first presented to the police by a physician and psychologist, Doctor R. E. House, of Ferris, Texas."

Doctor Maskell now wore the expression of a skeptical medical man facing an empire; for the moment he forgot that he was a prisoner.

"What is the theory of this drug to which you want me to entrust my life?"

Very Simple

"The principle is very simple," returned Thatcher Colt. "You are aware that the most active and the most powerful of the five senses is the sense of hearing. This sense of hearing—with its super-sensitivity and super-activity—is the last sense to be annihilated under the influence of an anesthetic. Also it is the first sense to be reawakened when the effect of the anesthetic wears off. Long after we cannot see or feel, taste or smell anything on the operation table, we can still hear—and we can still talk."

"True," nodded Doctor Maskell.

"If you have ever fainted, you may recall that before you opened your eyes you heard sounds, voices of people around you, or other disturbances. There is a period of time in which you hear, but are still not realy conscious—a period when your ego has not yet asserted itself."

"Yes."

"Well, there is where scopalamin comes in. It lulls all the other senses to deep enough hearing. It is the theory of the inventor—and may I add, of myself—that during that period when you can hear, but cannot exercise your other senses, it is impossible, even for a clever man like yourself, to tell a lie."

"Humph!" said Doctor Maskell, enigmatically, with a strange look at Thatcher Colt. "This is a real challenge. You maintain that under the influence of this drug I could not ex relse my will power to withhold the answer to any questions, if I so wished?"

"Exactly!"

"And do these super-scientists who equip the police with these marvellous police devices have no fear that the instinct for self-preservation may not interfere with your pretty little medicine?"

"A large percentage of cases think that it does not," replied Thatcher Colt. "I could sit here and cite cases to you, but there isn't time. The stuttering young man of Meridian, Texas, was one example.

Markell Smiled

There was also the case of O'Leary, known ac the waiig dead man."

Doctor Maskell smiled with a trace of malice.

"Do you think that District Attorney Dougherty would be convinced if I maintained by innocence under the influence of the drug?" he asked mockingly.

Thatcher Colt calmly relighted his pipe.

"The District Attorney wants the truth as much as you or I," he argued.

"I'll try anything once," declared Dougherty, his head to one side, as he closed one eye and looked at Maskell skeptically. Strange that both these men, each distrusting the other, equally distrusted the drug—if at all. Suddenly Doctor Maskell came to a resolution. He stood up, took off his coat, rolled up his sleeves, and bared his large, heavy muscled arm, bristling with long, black hairs.

"Let's go," was all he said.

All the notes of what was said and done here, after the scopalamin was plunged into the doctor's arm and he was stretched out on a couch at Thatcher Colt's library, now lie before me. They are the most unusual I have ever taken in any criminal case. They also show Doctor Maskell speaking without any reserve wontever. Stretched out there, he was utterly relaxed. His eyes were closed. His breathing was deep and regular. His voice was first heavy and decisive and almost; ground in its importance, but gradually it sank into a monotone like the murmur of a sick person talking in a fevered sleep.

"Doctor, did you kill Geraldine Foster?"

"I did not."

"Did you attack her with an axe?"

"I did not."

"Did you hate Geraldine Foster?"

"Yes."

"No."

"Did you love her?"

"No."

"Did you have any reason to kill Geraldine Foster?"

"Yes."

We all leaned forward toward the prostrate doctor as he made that confession. The silence was intense, until Thatcher Colt's brittle voice broke the silence.

"What reason did you have to kill her?"

"Because she threatened someone I love."

His Wife

"To whom did she threaten to betray you?"

"To another woman."

"Who is this other woman?"

"My wife!"

We looked at eaach other in complete astonishment. I suppose that I, too, am a sentimentalist. But in the fact of this amazing confession, I felt some kind of compassion for this helplessness of this strong man, this giant who possessed over himself such vast self-control, but who now lay like a fevered child, telling on himself. But if Thatcher Colt shared my feeling, he did not show any indication of it. Boldly he shot the next question.

"You say your wife? How long have you been married?"

"Fourteen years."

"When did you separate?"

"Ten years ago."

"You were not divorced?"

"No!"

The voice of the doctor had become very weary.

"She will not give me a divorce. That was why I went away. To Reno. But I came back when——"

"When what?"

"When I knew that Geraldine was really missing and that it looked funny about me."

"What did Geraldine threaten?"

"To expose a beautiful love—drag it through the courts—and blacken the name of one I love."

"Who is that one?"

"I—won't—answer—that."

"How did Geraldine Foster know about your wife?"

"I don't know."

"Didn't you ask her?"

"No."

"Why?"

"I had no opportunity."

Then Thatcher Colt came back to that old sensitive spot in the doctor's mind.

"Why are you so stubborn about where you spent the time when Checkles and Doris were eating their ice cream?"

"Because I will not drag her into it."

"Who?"

"I—won't—answer—that."

"Her name?"

"Again I say, I will not tell it."

Will Not Tell

Thatcher Colt gave Dougherty a swift glance, and the two men bent low over the powerful man who was now grumbling like a man in fever.

"Why were you with her?"

"I was not with her. I was waiting for her."

"Why?"

"Because it looked like an attempt had been made to frap us."

"Tell me."

"Mrs. Westcock said that she was wanted in the house on Fiddler's Road."

"Yes. Well?"

"It seemed strange to me. Because I knew the lady in the case, whom I very deeply adore and respect—do you understand that?"

His voice had become querulous, more than ever like the tones of a fevered patient. "I—I—I won't talk if you don't."

"Of course we understand that, Doctor, old boy," said Dougherty, in the soft tones of a deceiver.

"I didn't mean you," answered the doctor sleepily. You don't matter to me. What does Mr. Colt say?"

As Dougherty retreated, scowling, Thatcher Colt said, in a voice full of eagerness and conviction:

"I fully understand that, Doctor. Please proceed."

"Well, I first went to the telephone and called up the lady as I had suspected she was at home. Fortunately, she was alone. I explained what had happened. She said she would come and meet me—and left me of a note she had from Geraldine, demanding blackmail."

"Where did you meet her?"

"We arranged to meet casually at an auction in an art gallery nearby. But she did not appear. Later I learned that circumstances made it impossible for her to leave the house."

"And you spent the next hour waiting for her in the art gallery?"

Was He Seen?

"I did—more than an hour."

"During that time, did any one see you who could testify to your presence there?"

Subsequently, when Colt had these statements checked, not one person could remember having seen Doctor Maskell in the auction room.

"I did my best to remain inconspicuous."

"In that time, you could have gone to Fiddler's Road and committed the murder."

Then Thatcher Colt came back to that old sensitive spot in the doctor's mind.

"The lady will testify to these facts."

"I will not permit her. I will not name her."

"She will come forward on her own account then?"

"Not if I can prevent it."

"You would rather die than involve her?"

"Undoubtedly."

"Why?"

"For a good reason."

"That is a bit sort of yarn that Chapman, the super-bandit, tried to put over. Why don't you try to be original?" Dougherty fleered.

NEWS OF THE PORT OF BOSTON

By JAMES J. DELANEY

No further reduction in rates for transatlantic passenger travel will be made, it was decided at the meeting of the transatlantic conference, comprising lines having services from the United States to Europe.

Economic conditions do not justify any decrease in the rates below those established when the conference met last in December, it was pointed out.

BILL OPPOSED

The Boston port authority announces that it is opposed to House of Representatives Bill No. 624, which provides that a new board be established with increased powers. The present bill is known as the Arthur E. Hatch bill. No date has been set for a hearing.

The local board opposes it on the ground that it serves no useful purpose in that all that what it purports or plans to do is being undertaken or planned by the present group. Increasing the power of the present board, it was pointed out, is a gait toward which the port authority is striving.

DEDICATION PLANNED

With the return of Mrs. Anne C. M. Tillinghast, United States Commissioner of Immigration in this port, plans for the dedication of the new executive offices are being made. The building which houses the immigration station at East Boston has been made over. Executive offices have been moved from the first to the second floor. Mrs. Tillinghast was confined to her home with influenza for the past week.

LOSSES DECREASE

Casualties to vessels of 500 gross tons and upward during December decreased. Returns compiled by the Liverpool Underwriters Association show total losses of nine vessels and partial losses of 756 vessels during 1930. In 1929, there were 33 total losses and 1120 partial losses.

WOOD PULP

Wood pulp was the chief Boston item in the cargo of the M. S. Odenaholm, Swedish, which came in from Gefle, Gefle, Norrsundet, Helsingfors and Malmo, docking at Pier 48, Mystic Wharves. She was delayed three days in crossing by heavy weather. While no damage was suffered she was hampered in a battle with northwesterly gales and heavy weather. She carried 8275 bales of wood pulp and 208 cases of Swedish bread. When she finishes unloading here she will leave for Baltimore and New York.

ORIENTAL CARGO

With a rich cargo of Oriental merchandise from the Far East, the M. S. Japanese Prince, Prince Line, is due in Boston today, according to a wireless received. Exports state there are two passengers from Boston on board. She brings 700 tons of cargo for this port.

SHIFT CAPTAINS

In anticipation of the commissioning of the new liner President Hoover several changes have been made among the officials of the Dollar Line fleet, according to announcement made by the Boston agent, Irving T. Sorge. The S. S. President Polk, docking here today, is now in command of Capt. Carl Jokstad, transferred from the President Monroe, which operates between San Francisco and Manila. Her former skipper, Capt. William A. Rue, has been assigned to the President McKinley in the transpacific run from San Francisco to the Orient. The President Polk is nading her 21st voyage around the world.

Man Held as Auto Plate Counterfeiter

Norwalk, Ct., Feb. 7 (INS)—Leslie Ritchie of Westport, a veterinarian, will appear in city court Monday to answer a charge of driving an auto with counterfeit license plates. According to police, Ritchie repainted last year's plates, hammered out a zero and replaced it with a figure.

Youth Carried Away on Ice Believed Safe

Charlevoix, Mich., Feb. 7 (AP)—George Kruskie, 21-year-old Cross Village fisherman, carried away yesterday on an ice floe that broke away without warning, was believed today to have drifted to safety on Grand Traverse bay, 10 miles out in Lake Michigan. Signal fires were reported from the island last night.

Mountain Folk Flee From Forest Fires

Marion, N. C., Feb. 7 (AP)—With highways almost impassable in spots and dense fog and smoke hanging over the mountainsides, mountain folk in two sections of McDowell County today were fleeing forest fires which were devastating a wide area.
